Northwest's New Storms Head Toward Great Plains

Army Rescues 8000 Snowbound in Three States and Feeds 224,975 Livestock

Chicago, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—A new storm system developed in the Northwest today and was moving eastward where the Army's huge "Operation Snowbound" was fast shoving back the mountainous drifts in the Plains States.

Forecasters said heavy snow was reported in Washington and Idaho but that it was "too early to tell" how much more crippling snow will hit farther East.

At Blackfoot, Idaho, tonight, snowplows and farmers in horse-drawn sleighs rescued 42 children marooned in two school buses on snow-clogged highways.

Two Cache County buses in Utah were reported snowbound with school children aboard. All passengers were reported safe.

Forecasters expected snow to hit Montana and Wyoming Saturday, but the storm may lose some of its force after crossing the Continental Divide.

8000 Freed by Army

The warning came as the Army's disaster force spread across 138,880 square miles of the frozen Western plains. Some areas reported they were winning the battle of the great January snows.

Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, commanding the operation at Omaha, announced that 8000 persons were liberated from their snowbound homes in the last 24 hours in Nebraska, Wyoming and South Dakota.

In addition, Pick's huge force of bulldozers crashed through 3551 miles of roads in the three States to bring feed to 224,975 head of hunger-weakened livestock.

Seventeen Western States reported a total of 137 persons dead as result of the bad weather since New Year's Day.

Insurance Concern Closed

Texas had the greatest number of deaths attributable to the weather, 33. Nebraska had 22, Wyoming 13, and Missouri 12. Utah and Washington reported nine each, Colorado eight, and Oregon seven. New Mexico and Nevada had five each, South Dakota four, Kansas three, Montana and Oklahoma two each, and Arizona, California and Iowa one each.

The weather forced the Western Livestock Insurance Co. of Denver out of business. Secretary-Treasurer Del Vanfilder said the firm paid out so many claims to ranchers that it was forced to the wall.

Ranchers believed the total of dead livestock by spring would be tremendous. One bulldozer crew in South Dakota told of finding 3200 cattle dead in the snow.

Air Force planes and ground equipment pushed their aid to distressed stock and snow-bound persons in the Rocky Mountain States and the Navajo Indian reservations of Arizona.

In North Dakota, Gov. F. G. Aandahl declared an emergency at the Indian reservation west of Minot.

But at the reservation of South Dakota, officials said "things are looking up."

At Neligh, Nebr., Pick's crews found a farm wife grieving by the body of her husband, who had died five days ago. She was unable to leave her snowbound home to make funeral arrangements.

Pick gave this breakdown of

Motive Given In Glen Burnie Murder Case

Edwards' Confession States Couple Nearly Ran Him Down on Road

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—The defense strove today to show discrepancies in a confession by Thomas A. Edwards that he murdered a Glen Burnie couple because their car almost ran him down.

The confession disclosed for the first time a motive for the September 17 killing of John A. Mahlan and Mary Kline.

Admitted after three days of legal maneuvering and over defense objections, the statement quoted Edwards as saying he shot the couple in Mahlan's parked car.

Says He Was Forced Off Road

The 23-year-old Edwards' statement to Capt. Henry J. Kriss, chief Baltimore detective, said it happened after the car forced him to jump into a ditch near his Marley Creek home in Anne Arundel County.

Defense Attorney William J. McWilliams immediately began pursuing his announced plan to show the statement largely was a police theory of the crime impressed on Edwards by threats, promises and physical violence.

He noted that the statement and a stenographic report of a "rehearsal" of the crime staged by police officers with Edwards contained different versions of how Edwards removed the bodies and his method of driving away from the scene.

The statement was in a form of questions by Kriss and answers by Edwards, given November 11 in Baltimore in the presence of Edwards' father.

It recounted how Edwards left his home the night of the murders and started walking down Marley Creek rd.

He said "the car cut at me and I had to get off the road."

Edwards said he saw the car turn off into a lane and he walked

Smoke Fells 5 Firemen at Attic Blaze

Battalion Chief Among Those Overcome On Palisade Lane

Five firemen, one of them a battalion chief, were felled by smoke while fighting a blaze at about 5 o'clock yesterday in the attic of a home at 5160 Palisade lane nw.

Most seriously affected by the smoke were Pvts. William Stockton, 49, of 1416 34th st. nw., and T. C. Parker, 33, of 100 S. Aberdeen st., Arlington, both of Engine Co. No. 5, at 3412 Dent pl. nw.

Partially overcome were Fifth Battalion Chief George Darling and Pvt. Arthur Kay, 42, of Engine Co. No. 5.

All of the men were given artificial respiration, oxygen and stimulants at the scene under the direction of Dr. William D. Claudy, Fire Department surgeon who was summoned by radio. Stockton and Parker were sent to Emergency Hospital for further treatment.

The three-story white brick house in which the fire occurred is owned by Col. J. W. Sessums. He and Mrs. Sessums were not at home when the fire broke out.

The victim was identified as Richard M. Graham, jr., son of Richard M. Graham, an Air Force chaplain stationed at Albrook Air Base, Panama Canal Zone.

Beating Is Still Mystery

Cab Driver Asked to Pick Out Assailants in Suspect Lineup

By John London
Post Reporter

James Rowell, 48-year-old Yellow Cab Co. hacker who was brutally beaten at Thomas Circle January 14, said last night he will appear at police headquarters today to attempt identification of his assailants.

Rowell said police had requested he try this morning to pick out the attackers in a special lineup of suspects. Presumably the suspects will include two policemen at whom Police Chief Robert J. Barrett has pointed an accusing finger.

Barrett revealed Thursday he had relieved Detective Sergt. James Roche and Plainclothesman Angelo Bonaccorsy of vice squad assignments because he believed they were responsible for the assault on Rowell.

Roche was returned to his original assignment in the robbery squad and Bonaccorsy was sent back to uniformed duty at the Sixth Precinct.

Police officials last night refused to confirm or deny that Rowell had been asked to single out any suspects at this morning's lineup.

According to Rowell, he was visited at his apartment yesterday, at 5354 Quincy st., Cheverly, Md., by Captain Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of the Detective Bureau. Murray asked Rowell to appear for the lineup if he was well enough, Rowell said.

Rowell, who lost three teeth, suffered badly bruised ribs and a broken left arm which is still in a cast, said he agreed to appear.

Taft Expects Most of Labor Law to Stand

Congress to Retain About Two-Thirds Of Statute, Ohio Senator Predicts

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) charged yesterday the Administration is more interested in getting rid of the Taft-Hartley label for "political purposes" than in scrapping the content of his Act.

He called a press conference to point out a long list of Taft-Hartley sections, dropped from the Administration's labor bill, but which Taft claims are not really contested by Administration witnesses.

Predicting Congress will retain about two-thirds of the provisions of the old law, Taft told reporters:

"The question of repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act is disposed of . . . I don't care what they call it, just so they retain most of the provisions."

Myers Denounces Law

Last night, in a Nation-wide broadcast Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip of the Senate, lambasted the Taft-Hartley Act as an attempt to "handcuff" organized labor. He said that under it the labor movement "could be destroyed if we had a few million unemployed in America."

He declared that the act will be replaced with an act containing the essential philosophy of the Wagner Act.

That philosophy, he said, is that "the rank and file of the American people must have the opportunity to influence their own destinies"; and "that strong labor unions help guarantee a "free, decent, prosperous America."

Nor does that mean, he said, that "we are going to turn the country over to the labor movement."

Committee Hears Both Sides

The Senate Education and Labor Committee, meeting night and day in an effort to conclude hearings by February 10, meanwhile heard witnesses on both sides of the repeal issue:

1. Almon E. Roth, president of the San Francisco Employers Council and former industry member of the National War Labor Board, disputed charges by Secretary of Labor Tobin that the act brought "confusion" to labor relations. Said Roth: "I am sure that the record will show the . . . act has reduced industrial strife and has promoted the public welfare without infringement of any essential and legitimate rights of labor."

2. Joseph A. Beirne, president of the Communications Workers of America, however, echoed most of

Bill in Assembly

County Court 'Custom' Held Rights Denial

Annapolis, Feb. 4.—A "custom" practiced in Prince Georges County lower courts that, it was alleged, denies a defendant his constitutional rights, was brought to light today.

Charges that trial magistrates in the county refused to allow an accused to question a prosecution witness unless he first agreed to take the stand himself were made by William H. McGrath, an attorney and member of the House of Delegates from Prince Georges County.

In a bill he introduced in the Maryland General Assembly, McGrath declared that under common law and both the United States and Maryland constitutions, "it has always been the unquestioned right of an accused in a criminal proceeding to be confronted by witnesses appearing against him and to have the right to examine said witnesses."

He proposed in the bill that, "in order to restate and further clarify the law," trial magistrates be com-

U. S. Officials Note Sag in Prices, Jobs

Time Is Decisive But Signs Are Not Alarming, Adviser Nourse Declares

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Sagging commodity prices, marked by a "collapse" in the livestock market, and a drop in employment of two million persons in January, sent Economic Adviser Dr. Edwin G. Nourse into conference with President Truman yesterday.

Dr. Nourse afterwards told reporters he is not alarmed by either development, but added:

"These months are very decisive months and anyone who has responsibility is watching things closely."

Later Labor Secretary Maurice J. Tobin and Director Robert C. Goodwin of the United States Employment Service reported in separate statements that although unemployment is at a postwar peak, it is not yet alarming.

On Capitol Hill the Senate Banking Committee decided to find out why retail prices of some commodities are not following the downward movement of farm and wholesale prices.

Bread and Lard Still High

The committee is interested, according to Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) in why bread prices are still at record levels although wheat has gone down more than 30 per cent; why retail lard prices are still high, although lard is now selling at $12 a hundred pounds—the lowest in six years. Lard, which reached a high of $39 in 1946, is now below former OPA levels. It is the lowest since October, 1942.

Maybank said the committee's Small Business Subcommittee will start an investigation next week, and in addition to bread, lard and other items, will delve into the high price of soap and shortening.

Leading soap makers yesterday slashed their prices six per cent—the fourth cut in a year. Producers and processors of cottonseed and soybean oils complained that their products, from which soap and shortenings are made, have been forced down by more than 50 per cent. The oilseed men blamed export restrictions for much of their losses.

Maybank said his investigation is due to "so many complaints from farmers, meat packers and others that their prices are dropping without corresponding drops in retail prices."

The severe drop in employment figures was announced by the Census Bureau. Employment in

Pay Raise Outlook Still Unsettled

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The pay-raise outlook for District and Foreign Service employes and Federal executives is still unsettled today after three congressional hearings yesterday on the several salary bills.

No opposition was raised to the $330 retroactive pay raises proposed for District and Foreign Service employes. However, it is still undetermined as to how the various bills to cover all District employes will be handled.

Sharp criticism did develop on the executive pay bill before a subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee. Only two members of that group — Representatives Morrison (D., La.) and Miller (D., Calif.)—expressed approval of the bill as written. The Republican members, particularly, indicated the proposed pay raises for executives were too great.

Greek Rebels' Execution of Chief Hinted

Broadcast of 'Illness' Of Vafiades Is Seen Confirming Suspicion

Athens, Feb. 4 (AP).—A general staff spokesman tonight said Communist guerilla Chieftain Markos Vafiades is believed to have been executed by the rebels for having failed to conquer Greece.

The underground radio of the guerillas announced this morning that Vafiades has been "seriously ill" for several months and unable to carry out "the important tasks" assigned him." Thus, the announcement said, the central committee of the Greek Communist Party had decided to relieve him of political responsibilities.

The army staff spokesman here said the broadcast confirmed suspicions in Athens that he had been executed.

2 Feared Dead As Secret Jet Bomber Crashes

El Segundo, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—A secret, jet-powered Navy carrier-type bomber crashed into the Pacific today. Its two veteran pilots were presumed dead.

North American aircraft identified the occupants as Albert W. Conover, jr., 28, of Torrance, Calif., who flew the Navy's first jet plane, and Charles E. Brown, 35, of nearby Hawthorne, an Air Force hero credited with 15 kills over Europe.

The XAJ is one of three experimental planes built for the Navy. They have three engines, one jet and two reciprocating, and are the first bombers specifically designed for carrier use.

West Tightens Its Blockade In Germany

Trucking Ban Ordered; U. S. Plans Harder Terms on Currency

Berlin, Feb. 4 (AP).—The United States was reported today to be laying down harder terms for a Berlin settlement while joining in new counter-blockade measures against Soviet Russia.

A United Nations group working on the Berlin currency dispute has been told that four-power rule over the city must be restored before the West's marks are withdrawn, diplomatic informants said.

Russia used the introduction of the Westmark to impose the Berlin blockade seven months ago. At the Moscow negotiations in September the United States agreed as part of a general settlement to let Russia print all Berlin currency.

The new and stricter United States terms came to light as Britain and the United States tightened the counter-blockade by ordering an embargo on highway shipments to the Soviet-ruled part of Germany.

United States and British authorities announced that, effective next Sunday, the bizonal area will be closed to all highway freight shipments destined for the Soviet zone.

The United States-British order affects truck shipments by such countries as France, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland and Luxembourg.

When rail shipments from the west were stopped last fall, evaders resorted to trucks as a substitute. The new Allied action was designed to plug that leak.

A high American military government official commenting on the projected west German federal state, said tonight it cannot be set up before July 1 at the earliest—two months after the original target date.

Mindszenty Denies Force Was Used for Confession

Hungarian Cardinal Tells Open Court His Letter Written Before Arrest Is 'Outdated'

By Edward M. Korry
United Press Staff Correspondent

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 4. Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty denied in open court today that his partial confession of treason and espionage had been obtained by force.

Mindszenty testified that his letter declaring he would never willingly admit to the accusations of the Hungarian government, was written "when . . . I didn't see certain things as I do now."

He said the letter, written before his arrest in December, was now "outdated" and his partial confession to the government charge, read yesterday in court, expressed his present point of view.

Testimony Completed

"Did anyone force you to make your confession?" Presiding Judge Vilmos Olti asked him.

"No," Mindszenty replied.

The Hungarian primate's testimony climaxed a six-hour session today, at which both prosecution and defense completed presentation of testimony. A government spokesman said the trial might end Saturday with presentation of final arguments.

Prince Paul Eszterhazy and Miklos, codefendants, admitted illegal money dealings but—like Mindszenty—denied plotting to overthrow the government.

Laszlo Toth, 50 another defendant, a Catholic journalist, admitted having acted as a spy against the government, and added, "I regret it and want to pay for it."

Dollar Checks Involved

A fifth defendant, Jesuit Priest Bela Ispanyi admitted giving information to a church society leader who is now a political fugitive.

Eszterhazy admitted buying $8000 worth of dollar checks in black market dealings with members of Mindszenty's staff. He also said he had smuggled $29,000 worth of dollar checks—including one signed by Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York—out of Hungary.

The prince said he intended to aid Mindszenty's efforts to restore the monarchy.

Mindszenty challenged Eszterhazy's implication that the two had plotted together to restore the monarchy, asking:

"Did I or anyone in my name ever ask you for money for Royalist purposes?"

Eszterhazy admitted that no one ever had, and said that he had not seen Mindszenty since Hungary was liberated from the Nazis.

Identifies Letter

Judge Olti opened the afternoon session at 2:30 p. m. by reading the cardinal's letter disowning any confessions in advance. The letter was read rapidly, making it impossible to take it down verbatim, and no text was issued, but Mindszenty identified it as the

Post Executive To Head Group To Push Bond Sale

By The Associated Press

Promotion managers of the Nation's newspapers set up an organization yesterday at the Treasury's request to help push the bond drive starting May 16.

Raoul Blumberg of The Washington Post will be chairman of the committee. Its main task will be to make sure the campaign is brought forcefully to public notice, and to recruit volunteers for bond sales.

Promotion departments of newspapers have participated in past bond drives on a local basis, but this is the first time their part of the job has been organized nationally.

The committee was set up after a conference yesterday, at the Treasury's invitation, with Undersecretary John Graham.

China Communists Assail MacArthur

Red Tactics

Guerilla War Is Expected in South Korea

American officials are keeping an eye out for a vigorous campaign by Soviet-backed Communists to try to bleed Korea with guerilla war.

Current border clashes were described by the State Department yesterday as "minor." But officials suspect they may be a curtain raiser to a Communist attempt to stir up a crisis in American-supported South Korea beginning next month.

This is the usual start of a strained period of short rations in Korea, lasting into May, when the first crops come in.

Prospects are that South Koreans will have to cope with disorders without an early increase in American backing.

Nanking, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists tonight accused Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters of interfering in the internal affairs of China.

A Communist broadcast said 260 Japanese war criminals were being sent to Japan to serve prison terms on MacArthur's instructions.

The broadcast demanded these Japanese be turned over to the Chinese Communists, and accused Nanking of "selling the country" by executing United States orders in war crimes cases.

MacArthur's action was interference in the internal affairs of China, it contended.

A serious rift developed in the government of Acting President Li Tsung-jen and observers believed the cabinet of Dr. Sun Fo might resign if the rifts grew any wider.

The immediate crisis developed over removal of the capital to Canton, but the underlying problem was believed to be the unwillingness of certain groups to submit to the authority of the acting president.

Dr. Sun ordered the move to Canton; Li ordered the cabinet to stay in Nanking.

Government officials poured in to Canton despite a message from Li ordering them to return to Nanking immediately or consider themselves absent without leave. Sun's order to the cabinet to go to Canton had not been countermanded and Sun was remaining in Shanghai.

Peace negotiations proceeded at a half-hearted pace. Kan Chai-huo, Li's personal advisor, said a five-man Shanghai peace delegation would leave shortly for Peiping to make initial contacts with Communist leaders there.

Joint Chiefs To Consult on Atom Publicity

President Truman and the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be consulted on how much publicity should be given America's atomic energy program, it was learned last night, after a closed session of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

The row over the publicity question, which split the committee at its first public session Wednesday, didn't mark yesterday's secret meeting, members said.

The argument was over a suggestion Wednesday by Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the committee, backed up by Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Committee, that rules be changed, and the world told how many atomic bombs are now stockpiled by this country.

The suggestion was bitterly attacked by Senators Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Tom Connally (D., Tex.). At yesterday's session Connally didn't show up and Tydings was able to be present less than half of the 2½-hour meeting.

Some of those present said the meeting was almost entirely devoted to discussion of the Atomic Energy Commission's top-secret report to Congress, a report that Lilienthal Wednesday described as "the hottest in history."

The only discussion that concerned the publicity matter was a suggestion that the military Joint Chiefs of Staff be consulted before any decision is made.

McMahon said the commission will meet with top military men soon, and that the question "undoubtedly" will come up then. He added that he wasn't sure yet whether the number of bombs on hand should be divulged but agreed that other publicity could be permitted without injuring security.

Israel, Egypt Are Reported Nearer Peace

Rhodes, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Sources close to Dr. Ralph Bunche, United Nations Palestine mediator, said tonight he made "satisfactory progress" today during a 2½-hour meeting with Israeli and Egyptian negotiators.

Another meeting is scheduled for today, and may be "decisive."

Foreign Office sources at Tel Aviv said the United States and Russia will name their Ambassadors to Israel shortly, giving top diplomatic rating.

Final tabulation of Israel's election gave Prime Minister David Ben Gurion's Mapai Party 48 seats and the dominant position in the 120-member assembly.

Baltimorean to Advise Clay on Jewish Affairs

Frankfurt, Feb. 4 (AP).—Harry Greenstein of Baltimore, Md., was named today as the new adviser on Jewish affairs to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor in Germany.

Greenstein, who succeeds Dr. William Haber, will arrive about February 15 and remain for six months, United States Army headquarters announced.

For 20 years Greenstein has been executive director of Baltimore's Associated Jewish Charities and the Jewish Welfare Fund.

Shah Injured As Reporter Fires 5 Shots

MOHAMMED REZA PAHLEVI

Tehran, Iran, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Shah of Iran, 29-year-old Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, was shot at five times today by a newspaper reporter and escaped with slight injuries.

Martial law was declared immediately.

The shooting took place as the Shah was entering Tehran University to take part in the university's anniversary celebration.

Fakhr Raiee, the reporter, fired five shots. One went through the Shah's cheek and upper lip, another through his side and three into his hat.

An official communique said the Shah was only slightly injured.

A crowd grabbed Raiee and beat him severely.

2000 Hostages Reported Held In Venezeula

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The Venezuelan military junta is holding more than 2000 political prisoners as hostages to be executed in the event of a popular uprising against it, former Venezuelan President Romulo Betancourt charged today.

He arrived here en route to New York after being allowed to leave Venezuela under a safeconduct secured for him by the Colombian Embassy.

Sharply attacking the Argentine regime, Betancourt charged the "international totalitarianism which exists in America today has its roots in the Peron regime."

Venezuelan Embassy Pledges Cooperation

The new Venezuelan government promised through its embassy here yesterday that it will cooperate with other American republics in protecting the peace and security of the Western Hemisphere.

It also said that foreign property rights in Venezuela will be protected and that the investment of U. S. capital will be encouraged.

The assurances were drafted by Venezuelan Foreign Minister Luis Emilio Gomez Ruiz and outlined by Ambassadoor Jose Rafael Pocaterra.

3 French Generals Face Court on Treason Charges

Paris, Feb. 4 (AP).—Three generals of the old French army fought for their lives today before a French military tribunal against charges of treason.

The generals, held by the Nazis from 1940 to 1945 are accused of seeking to join the Nazi armed S. S. on the Russian front.

They are Alfred Fagalde, Rene Dubuisson, and Jacques D'Arras.

Fagalde testified he had written to German authorities offering to join their forces as a strategem to gain his release from the prison.

Fagalde said surveillance at the prison was greatly tightened up after the escape in 1942 of Gen. Henri Giraud.

Reds Return Battleship To British

Rosyth, Scotland, Feb. 4 (AP).—The battleship Royal Sovereign slipped into port 24 hours late today under a Russian crew returning her to Britain after five years on loan with the Soviet fleet.

Russian sailors standing at stiff attention lined the decks of the 32-year-old British vessel as she moved into the harbor to be turned into scrap.

She had been scheduled to rendezvous with a British destroyer at dawn yesterday but failed to appear. The Admiralty said today she apparently was delayed by heavy weather.

The battleship's black hull showed patches of rust, but her decks were neat and tidy. Her Russian commander radioed a request for a ticket to Saturday's rugby match in Edinburg between Scotland and Wales.

Return of the vessels held by Russia is part of a simultaneous transfer in which the Soviet navy is receiving its share of the defeated Italian fleet, including the 23,500-ton battleship Giulio Cesare.

(In Washington, officials said the United States is drafting a new note to Russia demanding the immediate return of 28 frigates and three icebreakers lent to the Soviets during the war. The officials said the Russians promised last December to return the vessels, but they have not.)

Burmese Victory Limits Karen Rebellion Threat

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 4 (AP).—A government victory at suburban Insein limited the immediate threat of the Karen rebellion to Rangoon today.

The main body of the rebels, routed from Insein by government troops last night, was reported fleeing toward Hlawga, 30 miles north of Rangoon.

Italy Casts Lot With the West

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi said today Italy has joined the movement for political and economic unity of western Europe because of the prejudice and hostility of Russia.

He said after a cabinet meeting that his country has pledged close collaboration with western European nations.

De Gasperi said Italy's westward ties are necessary because Russia vetoed Italian admission to the United Nations.

An earlier announcement disclosed that Italy had agreed to help direct the economic policy of western Europe by joining Britain, France, and a yet-to-be-named Scandinavian country on a steering committee of the 16-nation organization for European economic cooperation.

It was announced the organization's "interministerial committee" will meet in Paris February 15 to discuss economic coordination.

Canadian Suggests New Taxation Formula

Norway Sending Delegation Here

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 4 (AP).—A Norwegian delegation will leave for Washington Saturday to examine the obligations Norway would have to undertake if she joins the proposed North Atlantic alliance.

The group will be headed by Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange. Other members will be Oscar Torp, parliamentary leader of the governing Labor Party; Dag Bryn, undersecretary of Defense and Arne Gunneng, secretary of the Foreign Department.

Norway's Ambassador to Washington, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, will leave Oslo with the delegation.

The projected North Atlantic pact now is being hammered out in Washington. It would link the United States and Canada in a defense system with Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg and possibly other European powers.

Norway made it clear to Russia two days ago that she intended to look thoroughly into the possibilities of tying up with the North Atlantic pact. Russia had attacked the pact as an attempt by the United States and Britain to gain world domination and had asked Norway about her intention.

Defense talks between Norway, Sweden and Denmark ended in failure Sunday over the question of whether the three Scandinavian nations should seek a link with the West. During those talks Norway indicated a willingness to join with the Western nations. Sweden wanted a proposed Scandinavian alliance based on a policy of neutrality.

First 'News'

Russia Reads Of Truman 'Rejection'

Moscow, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Russian people were told today that President Truman had rejected peace talks with Prime Minister Stalin.

All Soviet newspapers ran the same headline, saying the U. S. Chief Executive "rejects peace talks" with the Russian leader. It was the first news here of Truman's position on Stalin's statement he had no objections to a meeting to discuss an American-Russian "peace pact."

(Mr. Truman said the United States would not go outside the United Nations for talks.)

Two Russian Fliers Land Here on Tour

By The Associated Press

Two Russian fliers, who made their exit from behind the "iron curtain" in a "borrowed" plane, arrived in Arlington last night.

Lieut. Peter Pirogov, 27, and Anatole Barsov, 31, arrived at National Airport shortly before 5 p. m. (EST) from Westover Field, Mass., first stop on their trip which was inspired by a "Voice of America" broadcast.

They especially wanted to see Virginia, of which the "Voice" description particularly appealed to them.

So with the help of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce and United States military authorities, to say nothing of much promised Southern hospitality," they'll get to see all for themselves.

Pirogov, speaking in halting English, said "we are very glad to be in America."

The visitors were greeted by our officials. After posing for photographers and holding a news conference, they started by automobile for Richmond, where they will spend the night.

The delay in their arrival here —originally set for Wednesday morning—necessitated cancelling visits to Mount Vernon and Alexandria.

President N. W. Kelley, of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, and O. A. Reardon, Alexandria, vice president, greeted the former Russian Air Force officers. Kelley told them, through an interpreter, that they will see contemporary life in Virginia as it really is.

"While our system may not be perfect we intend to hide nothing from you, for we have nothing to conceal. You are free to say what you wish, to talk with anyone you please."

"We share the belief of our national Government that a free nation should welcome the critical gaze of anyone and everyone," he added.

"We only wish that other Europeans could see life in America as it really is—that our capitalistic system could be seen first hand and not interpreted through the eyes of prejudice and distortion.

"Please realize that you can form your own opinions—that you can express them whenever you like. This is Virginia — this is America."

The Russians, through their interpreter, told reporters there is no organized underground in Russia except in the Ukraine.

Asked what kind of reception two Americans would have if they landed in Russia under the same circumstances, Pirogov said there would be made a great "boom and noise."

He added, however, that he doubts that any Americans would want to fly to Russia today.

The fliers arrived here in a C-21 Constellation. They took off Wednesday from Rhienmain, Germany, airfield, in a Navy VR-3 military air transport plane and landed at Westover at 2 a. m. EST today.

They told reporters at Westover that they had planned their escape for a year after hearing pleasant things about Americans from other Russian officers who met United States soldiers during the war.

They also had their own ideas about a Stalin-Truman meeting.

They said at Westover that they believe Premier Stalin offered to meet President Truman because the cold war "had gotten to a point where it might become serious. Stalin doesn't want war this soon anyway."

Atlantic Pact Text To Be Published Soon

By the United Press

The United States and six other nations negotiating the North Atlantic Security Pact plan to make public a summary of the treaty's long-secret terms next week, diplomatic sources revealed yesterday.

They said agreement had been reached on all major points and that consultations on releasing the details are under way among the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

It was reported reliably that the proposed pact will regard an attack on any member country as an attack against all. That would call for immediate action against aggressors but would not necessarily mean armed intervention.

Officials said that before the treaty terms are disclosed, Norway, Denmark, Iceland, Portugal and Italy will have a chance to see them in case they are interested in joining the alliance.

Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson discussed the treaty and other foreign policy matters with members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday. He met Thursday with Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) Republican foreign policy framer and author of the Vandenberg Resolution.

Man Sentenced For Exporting Planes Illegally

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—Charles T. Winters, 35, of Miami and Puerto Rico, one of nine defendants indicted for conspiracy to illegally export war planes for use in Palestine, today was sentenced to 18 months in Federal prison and fined $3000.

John S. Pratt, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, told the court that the action of Winters and eight other "endangered the security of the United States and jeopardized the relations of this country in a way that is almost frightening."

Winters and the others were accused of exporting three B-17 bombers to Zatec, Czechoslovakia, last June in violation of the United States munitions export control act. Winters is the first to receive sentence after pleading guilty.

Students Find It's a Small World...

By Perry Goodwin—The Washington Post

DUBLIN DIVISION—Irish eyes sparkled at the home of Joseph D. Brennan, 2017 Connecticut ave. nw., last evening when his son, Peter (right), and a visiting Marshall Plan nation student found a common tie. Peter shows the yearbook of the Jesuit Clongowes Wood College, near Dublin, where se went to school last year, to (from left) Esbyjorn Esbyqornson of Stockholm, Sweden, his guest; Diana Johnstone of 834 Rittenhouse st. nw., and her guest, Rosemary Nugent, a colleen from Dublin. The elder Brennan is Eire's First Secretary here

Two Foreign Students Find U. S.'Opulent'

Pausing in a whirl of activities, an Irish girl and a Swedish boy looked at the United States appraisingly last night, and the United States did not come off badly.

Esbjorn Esbjornson.20, of Stockholm, and Rosemary Nugent, 17, of Dublin, agreed that the United States is "opulent," the people "wonderful," and the houses "overheated."

The two are members of a party of 34 students from 17 Marshall Plan countries in Europe. They arrived in the United States the first of the year and will return in March. Their Washington visit, which ends this morning when they return to New York by bus, has been sponsored by The Washington Post and the Civic Education Service.

Miss Nugent, a dark-haired girl, has been staying with Diana Johnstone of 834 Rittenhouse nw., a senior at Central High School. Esbjornson, a 6-foot blond, has been staying with Peter Brennan of 2017 Connecticut ave. nw., son of Joseph D. Brennan, first secretary of the Irish Legation. Peter is a senior at Western High School.

Giving their impressions of the United States before rushing off with their hosts and friends to see a movie called "The Paleface," Miss Nugent said, "I like the people better than the country. I never met so many kindhearted people. They remind me of Irish people," she added enthusiastically.

"I like the close relationship between parents and children," said Esbjornson. "It is more friendly than in Europe. Of course, it is loosening up there, but here the relationship is more like that of friends than of parents and children."

As for education, both agreed that it was more "thorough" in Europe, but "it does not prepare us as much for the world," Miss Nugent said.

"Children here are given terrific consideration by their parents —it is so easy to get a high school and even a college education here. At home everybody doesn't have the chance," she said.

"I know," said Esbjornson.

"Everyone here is so well dressed," they agreed in unison.

Said Miss Nugent: "The high school girls of my age, their hair and make-up is so perfect."

Said Esbjornson: "It is restful to look at American girls. A lot of the girls in Scandinavia don't seem to care about their appearance; they just get out of bed and go to school.

"The only thing I don't like about American clothes are the gaudy ties," he added.

As for American architecture, Esbjornson, who doesn't like the ultramodern style, liked the American Colonial.

Turning to food, Miss Nugent said "I think Americans eat too much. The food is very good, but you mix tastes."

During a trip to Dallas, she said, she gathered that only Yankees ate fried chicken with a knife and fork. While there they had several varieties of game, and while she found "bear had a rather bitter taste," she thought, "the moose was rather nice."

They hate "commercials on the American radio," they agreed. "It spoils the music." But they like American radio comedians and "Dixieland" music, including jazz, but had their reservations about "be-bop."

Beaver Meat Sold In London, Along With References

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—Beaver meat was on sale in London today, offered as an off-ration delicacy to persons still hungry after eating the current 10-pence (16 cents) weekly ration of fresh meat.

One restaurant had an encyclopedia handy so doubting customers could read for themselves that the beaver is a fastidious creature, subsisting on water cress and the bark of the better tasting trees.

Some said you could still taste the swamp in it. To a few, it was savory indeed.

Airpower Isn't Enough, Bradley Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Feb. 4.—It would be "dangerous" and "reckless," Gen. Omar Bradley said tonight, to depend upon airpower to deliver a quick knockout in the event of another war.

The Army Chief of Staff told the National Industry Army Day Conference that if hope of defeating an enemy on the ground were abandoned, "we should not only be forced to abandon our allies with frail hope of liberation, but we might also find ourselves trapped in a long and punishing war of attrition through air bombardment."

Bradley said airpower certainly would be the "priority" weapon in case of war to be flung instantly against the enemy's heartland. But he said it would be "dangerous" to count on a quick knockout by this means, "for the concentration of this initial air offensive must diminish as we dip deeper into the stockpile of our atomic bombs."

The Chief of Staff said he did not question the right of any American to speak his honest opinion on the fitness of the Nation's strategic plans. His own position, he continued, made it his duty to speak the truth as he saw it. Then he said:

"Because too many Americans are searching for an easy and popular way to armed security through top-heavy trust in airpower at the sacrifice of our remaining arms—we are in danger of reckoning our safety on fantasy rather than fact.

"I do not depreciate the vast possibilities of airpower as a priority weapon for attack against any aggressor state. Nor do I deny that the threat of instant retaliation through an air offensive is our greatest deterrent to war today.

"But I must part company with those enthusiasts who ascribe to airpower limitless capabilities in winning an instant decision. Airpower, like every other weapon, has gaping limitations for war as we shall know it for many years to come.

"However crippling air attack can be, I am convinced beyond any reasonable doubt that should this Nation be forced into still another conflict, we shall once more be forced to gain the inevitable victory over our dead bodies—those of our soldiers on the ground."

Document Is Said to Reveal Spying by Poland in U. S.

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Evening Sun said today it had obtained possession of a secret document which seemed to bear out espionage charges made against the Polish Embassy in Washington by Lieut. Gen. Izador Modelski last fall.

A Washington dispatch written by Lila H. Thomson said the document was dated March 14, 1946, and addressed to the military attache of the Polish Embassy.

It was signed by Michal Zlmierski as Minister of National Defense and marshal of Poland, the dispatch said.

The document, the Evening Sun reported, instructed the military attache to establish a group of persons to join various Polish-American organizations. It listed several groups which could be counted upon to work with Communists.

General Modelski was recalled as military attache of the Polish Embassy last Septe ber, the official reason being listed as ill health.

Modelski at the time said he was called back because he refused to allow his office to become headquarters for a spy ring. He asked the State Department to be allowed to remain in the United States. The request was granted.

Modelski at the time said Washington embassies of all Russian satellite countries had instructions to spy upon the United States.

The Evening Sun printed a translation of the 1946 document which it said directed, among other things:

"Ascertain the nature and observe the activities of the Polish organizations in the United States. Especially observe through your 'residents' the Polish reactionary organizations, establish their contacts with similar circles in London and trace their contacts leading to Poland such as sending their agents and diversionists.

Gas Firm's Net At $1,475,610; $1.69 a Share

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. and subsidiaries yesterday reported 1948 net income of $1,475,610, an increase of $231,000 over the previous year.

After preferred dividends, the net was equal to $1.69 a share on 612,000 shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the year. This compared with $1.88 a share on the 427,897 shares of common outstanding at the end of 1947.

Consolidated gross earnings totaled $18,408,560, an increase of $2,072,827. Operating expenses of $16,087,281 were $1,922,011 heavier.

Meters in service in the District of Columbia increased 2390 during the year and numbered 173,021 at the end of December

Excluding its suburban subsidiaries, Washington Gas Light Co. showed net income of $1,403,374 for 1948 against $1,179,252 in the previous year. This improvement, the company explained, resulted largely from the changeover to natural gas and from the expanded use of gas for heating.

Unseasonably warm weather in December narrowed the gain in that month. System sales in December totaled 17,033,307 therms, a gain of 2 per cent over the same 1947 month. Sales for the 12 months set an all-time record of 150,589,681 therms, an increase of 14 per cent over 1947.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Walter Hyde was elected treasurer of Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corp. of Washington, succeeding the late Morris W. Bennett. LANSTON RESULTS: Net income of Lanston Monotype Machine Co. totaled $623,890 in the nine months ended November 30, equal to $2.49 a common share. This compared with $633,556, or $2.52 a share in the same 1947 period. Chairman David S. Herdrick stated that while sales and gross earnings were up for the period, the rise in costs more than offset the sales gain.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—The slump in grains gathered steam on the Board of Trade today with corn dropping more than 2 cents in a market which one floor trader described as "demoralized."

All corn, oats, rye and soybean contracts set new seasonal lows, as did September and December wheat. Although the general trend of the market was sharply lower, here and there some underlying firmness was shown.

May wheat, for example, ended with a small gain. Lard held above seasonal lows made earlier this week, although loose lard was offered at a new six-year low. Declines in oats and soybeans were not unduly large. It was only in corn that the market appeared panicky.

At the close wheat was 3½ lower to ¾ higher; corn was 5½ to 7¾ lower; oats were 1 to 1⅝ lower; rye was 6½ to 6¾ lower; soybeans were 2 to 2¾ lower, and lard was 30 to 40 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Sally Faked Aid Role, GI Insists

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A wounded veteran of the Normandy landing, unshaken in more than two hours of cross-examination, yesterday reiterated previous testimony that Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars had posed as a Red Cross worker in soliciting interviews with Yanks for broadcast.

The witness, Gilbert L. Hansford, 27, of Cincinnati, a veteran of the Twenty-ninth Division, donned earphones to listen to a playback in District Court of a recording alleged to have been made by Miss Gillars in a Paris hospital. Miss Gillars is charged with treason. The charges stem from a series of short-wave broadcasts, which the Government says were calculated to disrupt the United States war effort and discourage soldiers and civilians.

Hansford declared he recognized two voices in the playback—Miss Gillars' and that of another wounded American, John Lynskey of Etna, Pa. He had testified Thursday that he recognized his voice and that of Miss Gillars in another recording.

Yesterday's recording opened with the voice of a station announcer: "This is the German Overseas Service in Berlin transmitting to North America. You will now hear another broadcast in our series 'Survivors of the Invasion Front.' We should like to remind you that most of the prisoners whom you will hear in these interviews were captured during the first weeks of the invasion, when the American troops had to bear the burden of breaking through the Atlantic wall. The recordings were made several weeks ago in transit camps and war hospitals in France by our girl reporter 'Midge' (identified by witnesses as Miss Gillars). So, stand by to hear the voice of your boys who escaped alive and who are now interned in camps in Germany."

There followed a woman's voice interviewing some of the wounded. Their messages were along similar lines, telling of their wounds and urging their families back home not to worry.

(Two of those interviewed, Lynskey and a Paul Kestel of Cincinnati, are slated to appear as Government witnesses, possibly Monday.)

During the cross-examination, Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin brought out that Hansford had seen Miss Gillars only once, and that was in the hospital ward, for only from one-half to one hour, prior to his identifying her and her voice some four years later.

Concerning the hospital visit, Hansford repeated his testimony of Thursday. He said Miss Gillars entered the ward dressed in civilian clothes and greeted the men with: "Hello, fellows, I'm working with the International Red Cross."

Court was recessed shortly before 1 p. m. to give counsel time to gather some additional data. The trial will be resumed Monday at 10 a. m.

AFL Session For Truman On Labor Bill

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4.—The executive council at the American Federation of Labor today unanimously voted to "accept" the Administration's "one-package" revision of the Nation's labor relations code.

The approval of the AFL leadership, representing some eight million trade unionists, was made "without reservations," President William Green disclosed, following a two-day study of the measure by the council. The AFL chieftains are holding their winter meeting here.

However, Green, who will present the AFL indorsement of the Administration labor bill before the Senate Labor Committee next Thursday, said the AFL will seek minor changes in the language of the measure and one specific amendment. This amendment would protect the right of craft unions within a plant to carry out their own collective bargaining.

Emergency Clause Satisfactory

Green said that the council was satisfied with the section of the Administration dealing with strikes of an emergency nature, which calls for a 30-day cooling-off period but without the threat of power or injunction to enforce the delay.

This section, Green pointed out, was patterned after the machinery set up for the railroad workers which "proved to be practical and constructive" in preventing strikes.

The AFL leader emphasized that the 15-man executive council was unanimous in indorsing all the provisions of the administration's one-package labor bill, even though the AFL has wanted a two-package approach. The two-package program called first for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and restoration of the Wagner Act; secondly, amendments to the Wagner Act along the lines suggested by President Truman.

Green announced that Dan W. Tracy, head of the Electrical workers and a member of the council, flatly denied a Washington newspaper report that Tracy was opposed to returning the conciliation service, now independent, to the Labor Department, as proposed in the Administration labor bill.

Return of Machinists Studied

The council, meanwhile, is considering a move for bringing the independent machinists union, claiming more than 600,000 members, back into the AFL. The machinists pulled out of the AFL several years ago in a jurisdictional dispute with the carpenters.

In making this announcement, Green said in reply to a reporter's query that no steps are being taken to "reaffiliate" the United Mine Workers. John L. Lewis "disaffiliated" his miners more than a year ago in a disagreement over signing the anti-Communist affidavit of the Taft-Hartley Act. Lewis refused to sign.

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin is expected here over the weekend to make a general report to the AFL leaders. Tobin's testimony before the Senate Labor Committee on the Administration's labor legislation, and his dogged stand under sharp Republican questioning, won general approval of the AFL leaders.

Message Travels Half Over World For Wife to Get In

Chicago, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—A message had to be sent half way around the world before Mrs. Rita Beane could get her husband, Ed, 15 feet away, to open the door.

Ed Beane and Walt Ashton, both of suburban Oak Park, were in three-way contact with Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, on their amateur radios.

When Mrs. Beane stepped out of the house for a moment, the door slammed shut, locking her out in the freezing weather.

Beane, who had ear phones, did not hear her pounding or a telephone call. Finally, his wife telephoned Ashton and told him what had happened.

Ashton contacted the "ham" in Johannesburg, and a few minutes later Beane was astonished to hear a clipped British accent say:

Judge at Reds' Trial Blasts Defense Counsel's 'Harassing'

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina today accused defense lawyers for 11 United States Communist leaders of harassing the court, of taking "a crack at me," of seeking "to provoke me" and of trying "to wear me out."

He declared they would stop it or "take the consequences."

The judge's barrage came during testimony by Representative Vito Marcantonio, veteran American Labor Party Congressman called by the defense in its attack on the Federal jury-picking system here.

A defense attorney claimed Medina had misconstrued testimony that Marcantonio had sought to give on the literacy and intelligence of 25,000 Puerto Ricans in his New York City district.

Called "Impertinence"

"That is an impertinence," the jurist told the attorney sharply. "You lawyers have been at that for three weeks to provoke me, and I do know that if you keep that up there will be a day of reckoning."

The attorney sought to continue and the judge interrupted:

"I must tell you to stop or take the consequences."

After Medina had first ruled out the question about intelligence of the Puerto Ricans, the entire battery of defense counsel launched energetic protests.

"In every court proceding I have attended," the judge said, "when the court makes a ruling the lawyers don't like, they take an exception and go on from there.

"But not so here. Perhaps this is an endeavor to wear me out when you make arguments as you are doing now. That is not the proper conduct of an attorney. It may wind up by breaking me down. I hope it doesn't. I say to you now, stop it."

George Crockett, Detroit Negro defense lawyer, arose, and the judge snapped:

"Oh, now Mr. Crockett is to have a crack at me. You see a chance to harass me and you can't resist."

Another defense attorney, Harry Sacher, denied there was any intention of harassing the court, but Medina said:

"You may wear me down, but my intention is that you won't. The best thing to do is to sit down."

Marcantonio testified about a survey he had made on the residences of members of the Federal jury panel who live in his congressional district on the upper east side of Manhattan.

The defense asks that the panel be thrown out on the ground that it is largely made up of wealthy persons and that low-income groups, laboring men, Negroes and others are largely excluded.

Charged With Conspiracy

The defendants, all members of the American Communist Party's national committee, are charged with conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the United States Government.

Marcantanio said one of the members of the February, 1949, jury panel, a vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., lives in a "super swank" apartment house at Gracie Square.

It would take "a bicycle to go through the apartments" at that address because the rooms are so large, he said, adding that the apartments rent for $40 to $60 a month per room.

Several questions asked Marcantonio by the defense were cut off as Medina sustained prosecution objections.

No Force Used, Cardinal Says

same letter which had been sent to Catholics abroad.

The cardinal said the letter, written in November, was to have been forwarded to the chief chaplain of his palace at Esztergom if he were arrested.

The letter declared that "what they (the authorities) say about a person who has his freedom taken away will either be forged or false."

Olti asked when the letter was written.

"Before I was arrested, in November, 1948," Mindszenty replied. "I gave instructions to have it delivered as soon as I was arrested."

Denies Revolutionary Plot

"Why did you write it?" the judge asked.

"When I wrote it I didn't see certain things as I see them now," the cardinal replied. "My standpoint now is the same as was expressed in the statement I made to the Minister of Justice, and which was read to the court yesterday."

The statement said that he was "guilty in principle and in detail to most of the accusations made," but denied that he had taken part in any revolutionary plot.

Mindszenty appeared calm and gave no indication of nervous strain. He talked with his attorney, Dr. Kalman Kiczko. Court adjourned at 3 p. m. until 9 a. m. Saturday.

Lumbermen Fight Hike in Pay Minimum

By the United Press

Southern lumber producers said yesterday that thousands of small mills would be forced out of business if Congress increases the national minimum wage to 75 cents an hour.

They testified before the House Labor Committee which is considering a bill to overhaul the Wage-Hour Act to raise the minimum from 40 to 75 cents an hour and extend coverage to millions more workers.

Robert Darrah of Birmingham, secretary-manager of the Southern Wholesale Lumber Association, said the demand for lumber is falling off and there is "every indication" producers will have to cut prices. But it will be impossible to cut prices and raise wages, too, and many producers will have to shut down, he said.

Walter W. Kellogg, Monroe, La., representing the National Lumber Manufacturers Association and the Southern Hardwood Producers, Inc., of Memphis, objected to a provision for industry committees to fix the minimum between 75 cents and a dollar if conditions warrant.

"That is tantamount to saying 'we will repeal the law of supply and demand,'" Kellogg said.

R. M. Eagle, Carmona, Tex., representing the Southern Pine Industry Committee said the proposal might lead to price control if "disturbing economic conditions put pressure on the wage floor."

Burgman Here In Nazi Case

head, Victor Woerheide, special assistant to the Attorney General, asked continuance of the preliminary hearing to subpena witnesses.

The commissioner then explained that bond was not permissible on a treason charge unless ordered by a Federal judge. He asked if Burgman's health was all right.

"Oh, yes," he replied.

"Do you understand everything that has been explained?" he was asked.

"I think I do," he said.

"Are you familiar with American legal procedure and system?" Lawrence asked. Burgman said, "No."

He was told he would be given ample time to communicate with relatives in this country and to arrange for counsel.

After Burgman was fingerprinted at Federal District Court, a photographer asked him to remove his hat for a picture.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," the former Civil Service clerk said. "I'll make you a proposition.

"You can take my picture if you'll get me a lawyer. I haven't got a cent to my name."

He was then placed in an automobile by two marshals and taken to District jail.

Born in Hokah, Minn., Burgman served in World War I with United States forces. He later became chief clerk in the office of the military attache, United States Embassy in Berlin. He continued in that job until the outbreak of hostilities between Germany and the United States in World War II.

When members of the American diplomatic mission to Germany were interned in 1941, Burgman refused to accompany them. He was arrested last January 12 and charged with treason.

Vatican Paper Calls Trial 'Pathological'

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano said today the Mindszenty trial had taken on "the pathological characteristic" of the Communist judiciary system when "the accused admits everything, confesses everything." Cardinal Mindszenty resisted all blandishments and threats for years, Osservatore said, and "it revolts the reasoning and the conscience of the world for a bishop, a cardinal, a confessor of his faith . . . to admit everything now, when to yield would not have been more harmful than to resist."

Nagy Convinced Reds Tortured Cardinal

Richmond, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Ferenc Nagy, self-exiled former premier of Hungary, said here today he was convinced Cardinal Mindszenty, was tortured by the Communists in the first days after his arrest.

The former premier, who now lives at Herndon, Va., made his statements following a talk with Governor Tuck.

Nagy noted that reports said the cardinal had no visible signs of torture on his body. But he said he believed the cardinal had been "reconditioned" after earlier torture so that he would appear unmarked at his trial.

Stalin's Catechism

Stalin's answers to the questions submitted to him by Mr. J. Kingsbury Smith of the International News Service raise an interesting question of journalistic practice. Stalin has made use of this catechetical device on several occasions, and in each case has managed to convey an impression in no wise warranted by the letter of his statements. We think the American correspondents would do well hereafter to insist that when Stalin decides to be interviewed, the interviews shall take place face-to-face, so that he can be asked to clarify the statements he had made. If he is unwilling to do this, then such statements as he has given to Mr. Kingsbury Smith should be given a form that would make it plain that they were initiated by the Kremlin.

Crime And Punishment

The brutal 3-week-old assault on a local cab driver cannot be glossed over by the mere transfer of two policemen whom Superintendent Barrett terms "guilty as hell." Nor can the responsibility of the Police Department be discharged by a perfunctory search for the evidence Major Barrett says he has been unable to get. The atmosphere of cover-up which already surrounds the beating can be dispelled only by a speedy and exhaustive probe that gets at all the facts, no matter whom they may hurt.

The cab driver, James Rowell, is still suffering from the injuries he received the night of January 14 when two men attacked him at Thomas Circle. According to Rowell, the apparent reason for the assault was that he happened on the two men as they were beating a third man. Major Barrett himself has stated his belief that the two assailants were police. He also has indicated that he has reason to believe that one of the two implicated policemen has been paying Rowell's hospital expenses. Rowell meanwhile is represented as unable to identify his attackers.

This is a case of sufficient seriousness to shock all decent policemen. Out of deference to the reputation of the department, the least Major Barrett ought to do is press for trial board action to include all possible witnesses assured against intimidation. To guard against any suspicion of whitewash, the United States attorney ought to be brought in as a consultant. Moreover, if the police action should prove insufficient, then the subpena powers of a grand jury ought to be employed to insure that the assailants answer for their crime.

The Indian Problem

The problem of administering Indian affairs has been under examination once again by a task force of the Hoover Commission on Governmental Reorganization. While the task force only by implication seems to recommend additional Federal appropriations, it does suggest that the Indians be given more opportunity to regulate their own affairs and determine the use to be made of their own properties. This approaches in some respects the rugged advice that the Indians be thrown completely on their own to sink or swim. It seems unlikely that the Hoover Commission will itself go this far. What consistency there has been in Indian administration in recent years derives in large part from the recommendations of a previous study—the Merriam report of 1928—which Mr. Hoover as President put into force.

The sink-or-swim theory has its attractions, to be sure. In theory it would force the Indians to get out and support themselves in the highly competitive economy of modern civilization. In practice, however, a sudden cutting off of Federal guardianship and welfare services would have disastrous results—and the national conscience is not free of guilt as it is.

Our Indian population of about 400,000 is largely uneducated, disease-ridden, and without financial resources. In some instances, destitution and starvation are prevalent. Those States with the heaviest Indian concentrations are not prepared to take over the burden of such social security benefits as the Federal Government now provides. Moreover, they should not have to, since our obligation to the Indians is a national one. Removal of the Federal trusteeship over tribal properties would reopen the door to the old-time grab of resources. In many instances these are inadequate now for the people's support.

The answer to the Indian problem is not a simple one. But it surely is not to stop trying. The very least that can be done is to tighten up and revitalize the administration of Indian affairs, with consistent congressional support in the form of continuing appropriations adequate to do the job. In the meantime they should have the very best educational, health, and welfare services that can be provided. And we should not forget that a prime reason for the Indian's failure to "leave the reservation" is that he is subject to discrimination if he does.

Truman's Power

It is of vast significance that the Administration claims the right, irrespective of any specific legislation, of going to the courts for injunctions against strikes that imperil the national health, safety and welfare. Attorney General Clark's memorandum and President Truman's comments at his press conference clearly imply that in an emergency the Administration intends to use this alleged power. At the same time it asks repeal of the provision in the Taft-Hartley Act authorizing limited use of the injunction in certain specified cases. We are not surprised that these developments have given some union leaders a feeling of being pushed out of the frying pan into the fire.

The source of the power claimed is not clear. Mr. Clark speaks of "the inherent power of the President to deal with emergencies that affect the health, safety and welfare of the entire Nation" and refers to the Supreme Court opinion in the Lewis case. President Truman speaks vaguely of his powers as President and as Commander in Chief. Even though peace has not been officially proclaimed, this talk of using the power of commanding the military establishment as a source of dealing with labor disputes will send a chill down the spines of many freedom-loving citizens.

Mr. Truman is not, of course, the first President to claim extraordinary powers. Among others, Theodore Roosevelt asserted and sometimes put into practice the theory that the President could "do anything that the needs of the Nation demanded unless such action was forbidden by the Constitution or by the laws." That assertion of arbitrary power on the part of the President, however, has been widely condemned. It runs counter to the basic concept of a government of limited powers. In our opinion, it is unsound from the viewpoint of constitutional theory and has no proper application to the sphere of government regulation of labor-management relations.

It is true that the Supreme Court upheld use of an injunction, granted without statutory authorization, in the Debs case to break the Pullman strike in 1895. "Every government entrusted, by the very terms of its being, with powers and duties to be exercised and discharged for the general welfare," the court said, "has a right to apply to its own courts for any proper assistance in the exercise of the one and the discharge of the other . . ." The jailing of Debs for violation of this injunction has often been condemned, however, and the multiplication of similar cases led to the enactment in 1932 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act forbidding the issuance of injunctions in cases involving labor disputes. When the Supreme Court decided the Lewis case in 1947, Chief Justice Vinson contended that the Norris-LaGuardia Act did not forbid the Government to get an injunction against the coal miners. But this was because the Government was in possession of the mines under the War Labor Disputes Act, which has since expired. The court regarded the Government as the employer and the miners as its employes.

Now that the Government has lost its wartime power to seize struck plants, who can say where its power to obtain injunctions in a national emergency begins or ends? The least that can be said is that the existence of such power is highly uncertain. Our own feeling is that in the most desperate sort of national crisis the courts would uphold use of the injunctive power to save the country from disaster. Moreover, the President can always use Federal troops to preserve order. But these are measures of last resort. To fall back upon this vague reserve power to meet emergencies resulting from strikes, which are likely to recur several times a year, seems to us not only unwise policy but also an outrageous abuse of power. What the President and the Attorney General have said becomes, therefore, the strongest possible argument for spelling out in the new labor relations bill the injunctive power that may be invoked to protect the public interest when labor disputes threaten to paralyze the national economy.

Civilian Rule

A lot of murmuring may be heard from time to time against military occupation of jobs which are not normally considered within the scope of military responsibility in a democracy. The fact is that the Department of the Army wants to get rid of many of these extra-military tasks, such as, for instance, the governance of the occupied countries. Secretary Royall has now recommended transfer of control in Germany, but the President at his press conference said he had no intention of so doing.

It is highly unfortunate that the State Department is still unable to assume this duty in Germany. The explanation is that it has neither the personnel nor the other facilities to administer the American zone in Germany. There is something in it, but the alternative is anachronistic. In one capacity in Germany, the Army is part of the government; in another, it is the Army of Occupation. It is compelled, in other words, to act as a government in passing upon appropriations which it will use as an army. This is a ridiculous situation, and should have been corrected a long time ago. We need all the genius of our Army to be concentrated on the problems of occupation. For our troops, either as constabulary or soldiers, either inside Germany or on the borders, are bound to be in Germany for some years to come. Possibly the Hoover Commission will have something to say on the subject.

Reliving History

From The Gathering Storm to Their Finest Hour Mr. Churchill is now taking his avid readers in the Life and The New York Times installments of his memoirs. The prospect is that the new volume will have less varnish than the first. In the initial portion, to be sure, there are golden flashes, with occasional departures for Churchillian reflections on power and leadership, but in the main the drama springs from the narrative.

On power and leadership Mr. Churchill is entitled to be ex cathedra. He reveled in authority, insisting that in time of crisis it must be plenary, but he never abused it. There is a lesson in his experience for those who are so afraid of authority that they bury it in committees, as, say, the Joint Chiefs of Staff. However, Mr. Churchill, while asking charity for a democracy's leaders in emergencies, is impatient of toleration for ineptness. "If he is no good he must be pole-axed," he says of great and little office-holders. The rule is fundamental, though the critic, when he calls for the application of it, is apt to find himself accused of rocking the boat.

Their Finest Hour moves along swiftly and tumultuously. To those who participated in the Dunkirk period, the blood must again course through the veins as they relive this magnificent epic. Even the reader who was not there finds his spine tingling, and has the sensation of something felt. Mr. Churchill writes as greatly as he lived, though in a different way, as exemplified in understatement about breathless moments and in his generosity toward the little men of the period. Few men in history have had to make more "rending decisions." Perhaps the most fateful was over the amount of air raid to send to sinking France. Air Marshal Dowding in his Washington days used to tell how he went on his knees and gave thanks when France actually fell—not because of the fall but because the inevitable came in the nick of time before Britain had thrown away its last chance of a miracle.

The miracle happened. Mr. Churchill stayed firm in his shoes, but so did the British people. "There is no doubt that had I at this juncture faltered at all in the leading of the nation, I should have been hurled out of office . . . There was a white glow, overpowering, sublime, which ran through our island from end to end." Britain was the sum of Churchill in her finest hour.

Dr. James Lewald

In the death of Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School, the community has suffered a loss that will long be felt. Everywhere he is spoken of as one of the best-loved District officials. His unique service at the training school, which houses the community's feebleminded, could be measured by the manner in which the faces of his patients lighted up every time he walked through the institution. Dr. Lewald made a specialty of rehabilitating feeble-minded children. In a great many instances he was able to raise their I. Q.'s as much as 30 points. Forty-five of his patients at the institution were accepted by the armed services during the war. The training school as it exists today is largely a monument to his untiring services. In 15 years he built it up from a discreditable place of detention for the feebleminded to a rehabilitation center of recognized standing in spite of its continued inadequacies. The magnitude of his achievement stands out with special emphasis now that the community finds it necessary to replace him.

Taken For A Ride

Radio fans heard on yesterday's news broadcasts a voice reporting from China: "The Chinese Communists staged a long parade today through the ancient streets of Peiping, with jeeps, trucks, and weapon carriers of all sizes and all American made." There ought to be an investigation.

GHOST-TOWN

The town has no story—
Blown in wind, dark in rain,
The broken window-pane, the lamppost fallen,
Grass grown green along the trolley-tracks,
And the name of the street is forgotten.

The Nation has a story,
Towns are forgotten;
But the story of a Nation
Is only the names of a few towns, only
A few battlefields, a few men.
Where are the people gone?
Only the people have a history.
Only the people know what they were last year,
Tell of the old days and the winter's cold.

No children cry beneath the angles of rooftops,
No faces in the lamplight wait
On the street-corner for a girl, or Feet curled 'round the curbstones, wait.

Where are they gone?
Beyond the quarry where derricks lace
The sky—the hill where whistles blow from the train,
Slow spills the dust again in the quarry,

'Rent Pressure'

I notice in your editorial of February 1, "Rent Pressure," two statements that deserve notice.

"As a means of protest against rent control, there was never much chance that such an uprising (of landlords) would stampede action by Congress if only for the reason that there are more tenants than landlords."

Is the American method of arriving at justice to count noses on each side?

"Any new rent-control legislation should, in our opinion, take into account that landlords as a class are being discriminated against."

The general thesis seems to be that the landlord should subsidize the tenant irrespective of the relative wealth of the two individuals. Isn't it true that in any community the property owners are now carrying the burden of the expenses both necessary and unnecessary of servicing the community? My taxes have been boosted twice (and threatened again) since rent control began, as the city government expenses have risen.

I am sure most property owners are willing to do their part, but many of them must feel that they are being taken advantage of because of their helplessness.

Race Relocation Plan

I note through the press that Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia advocates relocating the races through a multi-billion-dollar program and moving as many as 1,500,000 Negro families from the South to the North, on a purely voluntary basis.

The people of Georgia are very well satisfied with the Negro inhabitant of our section and in no way could the whites from the North take the place of the Negro or the Negro take the place of the whites of the North. I will give the credit to the Negro for making the large plantation owners of my county wealthy and today if these Negro families were to migrate to the North our agriculture development would suffer very much.

I grant that Senator Russell wants to adjust this much talked of civil rights bill that seems to be taking the spotlight in Washington and he probably thinks this system would make the Northern residents be more familiar with our Negro populace in Georgia, but I venture to say that there would be very few Negro families to accept this relocation of their future homes, as they are adapted to the deep South.

'Mr. Stalin's Feeler'

Premier Stalin's reply to answers put to him by International News Service aroused much hope all over the world as a possible way out of the present stalemate, because mankind wants and is entitled to a breathing spell of peace. Walter Lippmann, whose reputation for clear thinking and cautious writing is well established, says, in part: ". . . it would be a blunder of the first magnitude, one which would weaken seriously our whole position, to slam the door in Stalin's face. . . ."

How does that above compare with your highly prejudicial editorial of February 1? The plain implication in the editorial is that Stalin not only supplied the answers, but that he prepared the questions as well. The answers seemed rationally, freely given, and while partisans would want them differently worded, they couldn't by any stretch of the imagination be construed as "feelers." If they were "feelers," then the I.N.S. should be accused of wording the questions to suit the Communists, and the answers could then be judged as "feelers."

Senate Chaplain

For the third successive time the United States Senate has chosen a foreign-born minister as its chaplain. This raises the question as to what is wrong with those born in the United States. In the City of Washington are over 40 clergymen who served with the Navy and over 70 who served with the Army in World War II.

Senators would enhance the respect accorded them if they knocked off the $2320 given for saying a two-minute prayer and said a few prayers of their own.

China's Lesson

Now the experts are supplying all kinds of reasons why communism has come to China. We've learned that Chiang was decadent, assumed too much personal control of minor matters, was rightist and against the people. But I wonder if history books and historians won't some day point words and fingers gnarled with perspective at the real why—blundering wishy-washiness that caused our Government and State Department to spend billions for China bullets and donate only empty democratic phrases for China stomachs.

Here's where we missed: We concentrated our most and best men and materials on Europe. We sent food and weapons, without supervising distribution. Therefore—as has been long characteristic of Oriental thinking—the black markets got the food, the soldiers got the weapons. Our brass hats—many of them—have been fretting in stateside garrisons since the war. Yet we kept them here when they could have and would gladly have gone to China, to train and supervise.

Result: Chinese Commies have our weapons. The Red orbit swallows a billion Asiatics. Former Chinese Nationalists swallow Red rice (and after that it's not hard to swallow anything the Reds hand them).

Sermon: The Army and State Department haven't learned it yet, and neither did China—"Gung Ho" means "Work Together."

Bishop Oxnam's Charges

In your January 29 edition two Catholic spokesmen, in denying charges leveled at Catholicism by Bishop Oxnam, made several statements which I should be pleased to compare with pertinent facts and/or authoritative Catholic utterances. They said,

1. That the Catholic Church is not "opposed to our system of public education." 2. That "bus rides and health services for parochial school pupils would amount to not more than 1 per cent of the total spent annually on the public school system. 3. That the Catholic Church has no desire to change the traditional relationships existing between church and state in this country.

In reference to the first statement, I quote from a pamphlet bearing the imprimatur of the late Cardinal Hayes: "Our first duty to the public school is not to pay taxes for its maintenance. We pay that tax under protest; not because we admit an obligation in justice. Justice cannot oblige the support of a system which we are forbidden in conscience to use or a system which we conscientiously hold to be bad in its ultimate consequences."

In reference to the second, I wish to point out that Washington Post Reporter Elsie Carper, in the recent account of her pre-election survey of St. Marys County (Md.) public schools, noted that the county had spent $60,000 during the previous year on parochial transportation, and that the sum was equal to half of the year's total outlay for the county's public schools.

For the third, I offer the following from a Catholic textbook bearing the imprimatur of (now) Cardinal Spellman: "But Pope Leo . . . declares that the state must not only 'have care for religion,' but recognize the true religion. This means the form of religion professed by the Catholic Church . . . In his encyclical on Catholicity in the United States, the same Pope gave generous praise to the attitude of our Government and laws toward religion, but immediately added: . . . but she (the Catholic Church) would bring forth more abundant fruits if, in addition to liberty, she enjoyed the favor of the laws and the patronage of public authority."

HOLTON R. SMALL.
Hyattsville, Md.

Bishop Oxnam's outburst of venom against things Catholic is nothing new in history. It is comforting to know that time and time again unbiased Protestant historians have registered their utter disgust at such misrepresentations.

Dean Stanley of Canterbury in Life and Letters of Dean Stanley, said: "I am convinced that Protestantism in general treats Catholics with shameful ignorance and unfairness." Dr. Shaff in his Political and Ecclesiastic Treatise, said: "The Roman Catholic Church is bemired from day to day with all possible calumnies." Dr. Nightengale, Religion of All Nations, said, "In scarcely a single instance has a case concerning Catholics been fairly stated; the channels of history, not grossly corrupted."

Dr. Littledale, in his Innovations, said, "Foxe and Burnet have so overlaid all the history of the Reformation with falsehood that it has been well nigh impossible for readers to get at the facts. Hyndman, in his Historical Basis of Socialism in England, said, "Protestant divines fail to discover anything but luxury, debauchery and hypocrisy in the Catholic Church of the fifteenth century . . . It is not true that the church of our ancestors was the organized fraud which it suits fanatics to represent it."

Rev. Washington Gladden (Protestant) at Cleveland, Ohio, on November 8, 1941, said: "It is sickening to note the morbid eagerness to put the worst construction on all that Catholics say or do; never, by any inadvertence, to note a point in their favor; and sometimes, alas, to give currency to the most fiendish fabrications and forgeries, attributing to them crimes and atrocities of the most diabolical character."

Crusade For Bedlam

No Time To Think

A ROSY FUTURE of perpetual noise and motion for virtually every American is envisioned by Mr. Jitters McDervish Clack, organizer and advance agent for the National Non-Thinkers League. Mr. Glack, a brisk young man carrying a portable video set, a walkie-talkie telephone, and with an inter-planetary aerial attached to one ear, rushed here for the launching next week of radio programs in buses and street cars.

"The Non-Thinkers League," he said, "is highly gratified to see a slow old burg like Washington stepping out along with other snappy American cities and putting entertainment in its public carriers. It may be only 'soft music and a few commercials now, but just wait.' Before long you'll have some real snappy stuff—barn dances, hillbilly shows, soap operas."

Mr. Clack plans to confer with John Q. Digit, public taste czar, to insure that radio entertainment on public vehicles not be over the passengers' heads. "We want it to be folksy and snappy," he said, "and above all, loud enough to prevent passengers from reading or thinking. People are getting too many notions in their heads.

HOWEVER, there's less thinking taking place in this country every year, Mr. Clack happily reports. He foresees the day when there will be so many things going on nobody can think. "Then we won't worry about wars and things," he points out.

The National Non-Thinkers' League has had a wonderful year, Mr. Clack says. "Everything came our way. The Supreme Court ruled in favor of loud-speaker broadcasting on street corners, in parks, and other public places. Broadcasting increased in groceries and other stores. A lot more radios were installed in taxicabs and private motor cars. A lot more people carried portable radios and used them on trains, on picnics and on the streets. Apartment house dwellers played their radios louder and later. Cocktail parties got bigger and shriller. Prowling tomcats materially increased. Truck and construction machinery made new noise records.

"Then along came television and filled people's living rooms with neighbors who outshouted each other, and the video announcers as well, telling how the machines ought to be operated. It was a swell year!"

An even greater advance on the noise front is planned for 1949, according to Mr. Clack. "We expect," he said, "to extend the lease of ether for commercial radio programs in taxicabs and even private motor cars in which people ride to work. We hope to see the walkie-talkie perfected, so that everyone will help make the downtown streets a Babel, and the telephones of people at home will ring constantly. We are promoting bigger television screens so bigger rooms will be needed and more chattering neighbors can assemble."

THE LEAGUE is vigorously fighting the recent proposal of church architects that churches should be made more conducive to rest and spiritual meditation. "We feel," said Mr. Clack, "that as long as people are kept uncomfortable and crowded in pews no one can meditate. We are opposed to meditation in any form."

It was pointed out to Mr. Clack that the founders of this Republic were often credited with having done such a good job because of their opportunities for thought and meditation.

"Nonsense!" he replied. "Jefferson could have written a much snappier Declaration of Independence had he been listening to a good swing band." "We are also," he continued, "warring against this silly proposal that keeps popping up that what this country needs is a day on which everyone would sit home and think. That is subversive propaganda. First, people aren't qualified to think, and second they don't want to think. My colleague, Mr. John Q. Digit, who is the final word on what the people want, assures me the American populace doesn't want to be bothered with thinking."

"But shouldn't people think—"

"Not at all! What do they think about? Themselves. Where is there a more ignoble subject? Worse still, they get crazy ideas about how the country ought to be run. Our whole idea is to keep people in such a dither they won't know whether they're coming or going?"

"Then who would run the country?"

"Disaster In The West"

Your editorial of January 31, "Disaster in the West," uses the expression "treachery of nature" and thereby lays itself out for a heap of criticism.

Nature is by no means treacherous. If we are so unwise as to cut too many trees and plow up too much land and thereby pave the way for floods, if we will drive our automobiles in all sorts of weather, and if we, in the country, are so improvident as to depend on day to day purchases of food and to a less extent fuel, and to have so many cattle and sheep in such large areas that we can't get to them readily, we can only curse our luck when we are caught short by unusual acts of nature.

Washington Calling

How The Press Helped Stalin

Childs

THERE IS something comic about the reaction in this country to the answers that Marshal Stalin sent to a newspaperman's inquiries about whether Russia wants peace. Even behind the grim, closely guarded walls of the Kremlin in Moscow it must cause some laughter.

The headlines, the speculation, the statements and the denials go on and on, and all over an old routine repeated several times in the past. At least twice before, Stalin has given almost identical answers to similar questions.

The soft answers previously given have not brought any change in the harsh conduct of the cold war against the West carried out under Stalin's direction. All this seems to be forgotten in the current furor.

In my opinion the press, or a section of it, has a great deal to answer for in this connection. Consider the irony of it.

The questions were submitted to Stalin by Kingsbury Smith, general manager in Europe of the International News Service. That means he is the chief representative in Europe of William Randolph Hearst. Thus, it is thanks in the first instance to the Hearst press that Stalin's propaganda is given circulation throughout the world.

AT THE same time the Hearst press, along with the McCormick-Patterson newspapers and other allies, is pouncing on the new Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, for the slightest suspicion of "appeasement" of Russia. And if nothing suspicious can be found, it is not beyond some to invent suspicions.

That happened the other day when a garbled and distorted account of remarks not by Secretary Acheson but by his brother, Prof. Edward Acheson, were made public. Professor Acheson, who has a distinguished reputation in his own right as an authority on international finance, was talking at a private, off-the-record meeting of his college alumni.

When he saw the distorted version of what he said, Professor Acheson issued a denial. But this did not prevent Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire from getting up in the Senate to say that if Edward Acheson said such things, then they must in some manner reflect the thinking of Dean Acheson. Quite apart from the obvious unfairness of such an insinuation, the irresponsibility of the performance speaks for itself.

The same press that starts the rabbit of the Russian peace propaganda immediately sets the dogs onto anyone who proposes to consider its merits. The mere suggestion that Stalin's answers might be more than propaganda is enough to bring down the awful denunciation of appeaser.

AT HIS press conference Secretary Acheson analyzed Stalin's replies and reduced them to proper proportions. There are, as Mr. Acheson pointed out, legitimate channels to explore the possibilities of peace, and end the frictions of the cold war. Too often ignored in the past, the instrument for peace, above all others, is the United Nations.

The time may come, and it may be closer than we think, when Moscow puts out a real peace feeler. This could come in a half dozen different ways, such as a serious proposal to end the impasse in Berlin.

When that happens, Secretary Acheson should be free to go as far as he deems necessary to work out a practical agreement for peace. Those who know believe that such an agreement is possible. The Secretary of State should not have to be concerned with dark suspicions of appeasement in anything that has to do with Soviet relations.

We have a right to demand of those who raise the shrill cry of appeasement at every opportunity what they are seeking. If it is war with the Soviet Union, then let them say so. They give every indication of believing that war is the only choice.

This is a strange phenomenon. For these same shrill voices profess to come from the true defenders of a free enterprise society. Yet anyone who looks at reality must realize that a third World War would end all our freedoms and reduce us to total regimentation.

The only hope for freedom is the hope of preserving a peace, however uneasy, in the next few years in the expectation that present tensions will subside. The fanatics and the hysterics who denounce every effort to come to practical terms with Russia seem deliberately to wish the end of our world. Theirs is a tragic sickness which must not be allowed to infect American policy.

Cabbie to Try Identification

"someone" had persuaded the victim not to identify his assailants.

"Nobody by the name of Roche or Bonaccorsy approached me and neither did anyone else ask me not to make any complaint against those policemen," Rowell told a reporter.

Rowell did report the attack to police but said he could not give any detailed description of the maulers. He has maintained that he was set upon merely because he happened along when two men were slapping another, unidentified citizen.

According to Rowell, he paused to watch, then went into the drug store at Thomas Circle to get headache tablets. When he returned to the street, the two men who had been molesting the third man accused Rowell of having phoned Second Precinct police while in the drug store, Rowell said.

Then the pair pummeled, kicked and kneed Rowell, forced him into their car, drove around the block, and finally let him out, he reported.

Rowell, a former clothing salesman, has been hacking only since last May, he said, when his physician advised him to "get outside work," because of a chest ailment, discovered during the Chest Survey last year.

Rowell also denied Barrett's claim that Roche was probably paying for Rowell's medical bills.

"What expenses aren't covered by my own hospitalization insurance and my wife's is being paid for out of my own money," Rowell insisted.

As police said they were continuing their investigation headed by Inspector Robert S. Bryant, Rowell told a reporter he still claimed the assailants appeared to be "out-of-town men" and that clothes were hanging up in the rear of their car—unlikely in a police cruiser.

Rowell told a reporter he was a "very observant person, but there just wasn't anything distinctive looking about those people"—his assailants. He said he did not think they were policemen because of their "rough talk." They appeared to be "small-time racketeers," he said.

However, Rowell said he thought he might be able to identify the assailants if he actually saw them again.

The police investigation was launched last Saturday on orders of Assistant Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott who was acting police chief in Barrett's absence, it was learned yesterday. Police yesterday refused to comment on progress of the probe.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay, in reply to a reporter's questions, said "I will act on the case, of course, when the Police Department comes to me with it."

Until police turn the case over to him, Fay said he does not intend "to usurp their function and to interfere with their investigation."

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, asked if he planned to take any action, replied "it is not my province to investigate—it's up to the Police Department."

3 Hearings On Pay Rise

and Civil Service Committees, had hoped to have one committee handle the entire District pay raise problem. But after an executive session of the Civil Service Committee at which his plan was discussed, it was pointed out that the Civil Service group has jurisdiction by law over the District's 7500 classified employes, and that the District Committee has the authority to deal with the salaries of police, firemen, teachers and other District workers.

Chairman Murray of the Civil Service Committee said his committee would be compelled to deal with the classified pay problem. He does not foresee any objection to the $330 raise for the District's classified employes.

During the closed session, Representative Miller suggested that a bill be reported out of the committee to transfer jurisdiction over the salaries of all District employes to the District Committee. No action was taken on his suggestion.

Also, Representative Rees (R., Kans.) suggested that the subcommittee give its immediate approval to the section dealing with the District's classified employes and that other provisions in the bill be dealt with later. Chairman Murray took the majority view that the bill should not be stripped down. He hopes for full committee action on the legislation in a week or 10 days.

Davis also said the District Committee may have to split up the bills before it into (1) one for firemen and police, and (2) for teachers. He explained that the problems rested with two different subcommittees.

At the District Committee session, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West submitted a draft of a proposed pay bill which would cover all District employes—a bill, he said, which would cost about $200,000 a year.

Resignations from the fire and police departments were cited as a reason why the pay bill should be approved. Fire Chief Clement Murphy testified that 24 men had resigned last year to take better paying jobs, a record number. Inspector Clarence H. Lutz of the Police Department said 42 men had resigned and another 18 were dropped during their first year of service.

The Police Department has 214 vacancies; the Fire Department 12.

Capt. Mark H. Raspberry of the United States Park Police indorsed the pay bill which would give his men $330 retroactive raises. School Supt. Hobart M. Corning, who didn't get a chance to testify, said pay raises for schoolteachers was a simple case of "extreme emergency."

On the Senate side, a hearing before a Civil Service Subcommittee whose chairman is Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) breezed along without incident. All witnesses indorsed the bill.

Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas urged the subcommittee to take prompt action on the bill and he promised speedy consideration when it reaches the Senate floor. He said the President was most anxious to have the bill passed in order to enable him to attract and to hold the best people in Government. The President, he said, was far more interested in this measure than he was in the bill that increased his own salary.

Budget Director Frank Pace described the legislation as the "most needed and least expensive piece of legislation the Congress will be called on to consider." He pointed out that the 16 top executives of General Motors were paid about $1,600,000, the entire cost of the proposed increase for Federal executives. He said frankly that the Government was not now able to retain many of its best people because of the low official salary scale which hasn't been changed in years.

Lindsay Warren, the Comptroller General, backed up Pace. He testified:

"Anyone who really seeks better Government, who opposes waste, extravagance and inefficiency, will further that cause by supporting this legislation to give the President the best human equipment to run this complicated Government machine."

At another point he said:

"Too often the compensation is trivial when compared to the job being done and what could be earned elsewhere. It has driven out many of those best qualified, has created hardships on those who stay at their posts through devotion to duty, and operated as a deterrent to any effective injection of new blood."

The Senate Subcommittee closed its hearings, at least temporarily, O'Conor said he would not resume hearings unless he was requested to do so by other subcommittee members.

The Maryland Senator said he would offer an amendment to the bill which would give the President the authority to give $17,500 salaries to 25 bureau chiefs. This provision, he said, would meet the objection of many Senators who pointed out that such officials as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the FBI director, REA administrator and others wouldn't benefit by it.

O'Conor said it had been planned to raise the salaries of bureau chiefs and other officials in the bill to overhaul the classification act which the Administration is drafting.

Hearings before the House Civil Service Committee will resume Tuesday with Arthur S. Flemming, a former Civil Service commissioner, as the witness.

[The Associated Press said a mother and two young children were rescued from their snowbound truck early this morning after being stalled in a raging blizzard for more than 12 hours near Williams, Ariz. Mrs. Ray Hancock and the youngsters were taken to the Valle airport, about 30 miles north.]

At Washington, officials of 13 Government agencies and the Red Cross today agreed on a bill to provide 11 million dollars in emergency funds for use in any disaster like the Western blizzard.

The measure was drafted at President Truman's request by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator.

New Labor Law

By Mark Sullivan

Is The Public Interest Protected?

Sullivan

THE MOST fundamental test of the new labor law proposed by the Truman Administration is the relation between it and the public interest. By "public interest" in this test is meant not merely the good of the public in a broad sense. That is a matter of opinion and judgment. What is meant is the relation between the proposed law and the authority of Government. On this point there is an illustration in one provision of the new bill.

The proposed bill repeals a provision of the existing Taft Hartley law which forbids strikes by employes of Government. What this repeal means—not merely as to its specific effect but as to a principle of government in the broadest sense—can be understood from three sequent conditions.

The old Wagner Labor Relations Act did not deal with strikes by Government employes, it neither forbade them nor sanctioned them. The reason for this silence, it is tenable to assume, was that at the time the Wagner Act was passed (1935) strikes by Government employes were regarded as "unthinkable." That word was used by President Roosevelt in 1937 in a general dissertation about the rights of labor.

During some recent years, while the Wagner law was still in effect, there were many strikes by unions of employes of local governments, State and municipal. These included strikes by teachers and other school employes, employes of municipally owned public utilities, and in such functions of city government as garbage collection and the like.

Taking account of such strikes, the Taft-Hartley law forbade them.

TO REPEAL this provision of the Taft-Hartley law, as proposed by the present bill, would have a special effect. It would be more than merely a negative step, a repeal. It would amount to an affirmative step, having the spirit and moral effect of giving sanction to strikes by Government workers. The sequence would be: First, statutory silence on such strikes; second, statutory prohibition of them, and now, if the pending bill should be passed as written, repeal of the prohibition.

How extreme a step the present bill would amount to if passed, how great the distance which deference by Government to the power of labor unions and leaders has gone, and how deep the principle involved, is shown by recalling President Roosevelt's statement in 1937. He was himself extreme, as measured by the standards of that time, in deference to the rights of labor, and the spirit of his statement as a whole reflected that deference. But bearing on strikes by employes of Government he said:

"Collective bargaining, as usually understood, cannot be translated into the public service . . . The very nature and purpose of Government make it impossible . . . The employer is the whole people . . . A strike of public employes . . . is unthinkable and intolerable."

ANOTHER deference to the power of labor leaders and unions, not so extreme but very far-reaching, is in another provision of the pending Administration bill. It deals with strikes by workers in industries privately owned but having to a special degree what is legally spoken of as a "public interest"—industries of such size and importance that cessation of them is by its paralyzing effect a public calamity. Examples are the Nation-wide strike by employes of railroads which paralyzed transportation in 1946, and the several coal strikes by Mr. John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

To deal with such strikes, the Taft-Hartley law conferred on the President the right to appeal to the courts for injunctions. This provision President Truman made use of on the occasions of strikes in the coal industry and others.

But the pending bill would take from the Government the right to apply for injunctions. Secretary of Labor Tobin, defending this reduction of the power of government as against labor unions and leaders, said in the present hearings that the force of public opinion could be relied on to prevent such strikes. To that the loud answer is the railroad strike of 1946. Public opinion did not prevent it, and after it took place President Truman asked Congress to give him a power much more extreme than injunctions—he asked for power to draft railroad workers into the Army.

The new labor bill presents Congress and the people with a call for the utmost attention. It is a trait of the people in a democracy that, while capable of extreme indignation over a crisis when it is acute, they are prone to be inert until the acuteness arrives. One of the greatest gifts that could be given a democracy would be the alertness and foresight that would not wait for the acute stage, that would take notice and act when the potentiality of crisis is being created.

Senate Rules Caucus Called By Democrats

Senate Democrats yesterday called a party caucus to decide what to do about changing Senate debate rules in the face of a Republican move to force the anti-filibuster issue directly to the Senate floor.

The Senate Democratic policy committee meanwhile reserved a decision on the rules change, but unanimously opposed a Republican motion to "discharge" the Senate Rules Committee.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) called the GOP move "senatorial discourtesy such as I have never seen," adding: "To discharge a committee for purely political reasons is going too far."

He said he is "hopeful" the Rules Committee will favorably report an anti-filibuster resolution next Wednesday.

Nineteen Southern Senators meanwhile met in the office of Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.) and agreed to an all-out fight on the GOP motion to force the cloture change out of the Rule Committee.

The Senate Democratic caucus was set for 10:30 a. m. today. Lucas said it will deal primarily with the GOP discharge move, but the the discussion will cover the proposed rules change as well.

The discharge motion was filed Thursday by Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), after the rules group voted 7 to 5 Wednesday to delay any rules decision a full week. Knowland's motion will automatically come before the Senate on Monday, and may itself run into a filibuster.

Lucas argued the Rules Committee has proceeded with all the speed possible and called Knowland's motion "utterly unfair." He said he "doubted" any major legislation will intervene before the proposed rules change is called up in the Senate.

Coffin Listed Wrongly For Traffic Violation

The name of Tris Coffin, columnist for the Washington Times-Herald, appeared by mistake on a list of traffic adjustments reported by police for last week.

A ticket for parking abreast had been given to John M. Peart of Zanesville, Ohio. It came to the Police Department for adjustment through the House District Committee and Coffin's name was placed on it through a misunderstanding, it was learned.

Editor Is Cited In Contempt In Divorce Hoax

Cleveland, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Contempt of court citations were issued tonight against four members of the Cleveland Press as the result of an expose of the city's overburdened divorce courts carried by the paper this week.

The citations ordered Editor Louis B. Seltzer, Reporter Leonard Hammer, Makeup Editor Richard Campbell and his wife, and City Editor Louis Clifford to appear in Common Pleas Court Tuesday and show cause why they should not be punished.

The citation stemmed from an expose in the divorce court of Judge Samuel Silbert, in which the Press obtained a "fake" divorce for Campbell and his wife by taking advantage of the crowded court docket.

Hammer posed as an "unscrupulous attorney," then "borrowed" a notary stamp and inserted his "divorce journal entry" among the papers of Judge Silbert.

The judge signed the papers without reading them and the Campbells, who were used only as a test case and did not actually intend to get a divorce, were declared legally divorced.

First Stroke Fatal To Roosevelt, Daughter Says

From Press Dispatches

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger denied yesterday that her father had suffered any strokes prior to the fatal one April 12, 1945.

Her comment, made on a radio program, was evoked by an assertion by Dr. Karl C. Wold of St. Paul, Minn., that Franklin D. Roosevelt's fatal seizure was his fourth. In a book, "Mr. President, How Is Your Health?" Dr. Wold said the first stroke was suffered in 1938 when the President was visiting his son James in the Mayo clinic in Minnesota.

In Washington, Dr. Ross McIntire, former physician to the late President, said the case history of Roosevelt written by Wold is "completely erroneous."

"Of course, it is not true that the President had had three strokes," he said. "No such thing ever occurred."

British Trade With Canada To Be Probed

By the United Press

The Senate Agriculture Committee will open an investigation Tuesday into British purchases of Canadian wheat with United States recovery dollars, chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) announced yesterday.

Thomas said he will ask European Recovery Administrator Paul G. Hoffman or Dr. Dennis A. Fitzgerald, head of the Economic Cooperation's food division, to discuss the wheat-buying phase of the recovery program.

Senator Milton R. Young (R., N. Dak.) touched off the inquiry with a statement that ECA is buying Canadian wheat for Britain when the wheat surplus here is forcing prices down.

In addition to ECA officials, he said his committee will question Commerce and Agriculture department officials and representatives of the Army's Quartermaster department.

Hoffman has claimed that Canadian wheat purchases saved American taxpayers 50 million dollars because Britain got the wheat at 43 cents to $1.20 a bushel below United States prices.

Meanwhile, the Army temporarily has suspended purchases of Argentine beef because its meat pipelines are full, an Army official said today.

He said the Army for the time being at least is buying only American beef and he denied the action is aimed at keeping domestic meat prices up.

Some Western cattlemen and Congressmen have been urging the Army to stop buying Argentine beef, and to buy American beef to prevent domestic prices from sagging.

The Army has bought 14,400,000 pounds of Argentine beef for shipment to military personnel overseas since July.

Western Credit Control Laid to Bank of America

The Federal Reserve Board sought yesterday to show that the Transamerica Corp. monopolizes loan credit in the West largely through a veiled control over the Bank of America.

Solicitor Leonard Townsend put into the board's antitrust hearing allegations that Transamerica exercises such a control through proxy voting of stock and through officer and director cooperation.

Hearings Officer R. M. Evans, a member of the board, let Townsend's data go into the record over repeated objections by Transamerica counsel Samuel B. Stewart jr.

Stewart, who contends that Transamerica divested itself of control over the Bank of America in 1937, said information presented by the board constituted a "flagrant violation" of rules against hearsay evidence.

Senate Group Backs Export Control Bill

After adopting an amendment giving the Secretary of Agriculture power to decontrol surplus farm commodities, the Senate Banking Committee yesterday approved a 28-month extension of export controls.

Committee action cleared the way for possible final congressional action next week on the Administration-sought measure.

The committee amendment would give the Agriculture Department full control over agricultural commodities except in case where continued controls are deemed necessary to foreign policy or national security.

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) said he hopes to get Senate action on the bill Monday.

The House Banking Committee has approved a similar measure without the Senate amendment.

The farm products provision was offered by Senator William Fulbright (D., Ark.) to meet complaints by producers, processors and exporters of lard, cottonseed and soybean oils and other products that price-depressing surpluses have accumulated in this country because of export controls.

Maybank said that both he and Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) had been personally assured by President Truman the Agriculture Department would be given control over farm products anyway.

The amendment will make sure, Maybank declared, that Switzerland or some South American country with plenty of dollars could not come in and buy up all surplus farm products.

The President's Calling List

By The Associated Press

Unitarian Church Children Send Sports Supplies to Japs

GOODWILL GIFTS—Young Japanese in Hiroshima admire some of the school supplies sent by children from All Souls' Church (Unitarian), 16th and Harvard sts. nw. Children in the bomb-shattered town have also received athletic equipment from the Washington children

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Because of a gift from a group of children from All Souls' Church (Unitarian) in Washington, children at Honkawa Elementary School, Hiroshima, Japan, may now be playing baseball or ping pong.

The story behind the gift of athletic supplies to the atom-bomb stricken town began back in 1946.

On November 10 of that year the Rev. A. Powell Davies, pastor of All Souls' Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., delivered a sermon denouncing a cake shaped in the form of an atomic explosion.

Reports of the sermon were carried in newspapers and magazines throughout the Nation. An American official in Japan learned of it and wrote to Dr. Davies about the plight of the children in the town where the bomb struck.

The children there, he wrote, were trying to learn democracy with pencil stubs and no pencils at all, with poor grade paper if they had any, and with no equipment for athletics.

He suggested a "desk-cleaning project" as a means by which American children could salvage used pencils and notebooks which mean so little to them and which would mean so much to the children of Hiroshima.

Shortly afterward, the children of All Souls' sent seven wooden boxes of supplies, pencils, paper, crayons, tablets, and paper clips, to the children of Honkawa Elementary school. The supplies arrived just before Christmas, 1947.

Letters of thanks from the children of Hiroshima were sent to All Souls' Church telling of the children's joy at the luxury of new pencils with erasers attached, colored construction paper, and all the things which are commonplace in the American schoolroom.

The children sent gifts to their Washington friends, too—books of water colors, rag dolls and even a set of colored "comic" song books.

U. S. Spiritual Heritage To Be Sermon Theme

At 11 a. m. Sunday Dr. Davies will begin a series of sermons on the American spiritual heritage, speaking on the faith of such men as Washington, Franklin, Lincoln, Whitman and Emerson. The opening sermon will be "The Struggle for the Mind of America."

Lutherans Set Inner Mission Observance

Lutheran churches in the Greater Washington area will observe Inner Mission Sunday this week as part of the twenty-first annual roll call of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society.

The Rev. Donald F. Bautz, executive director of the society, will speak at 9:30 a. m. at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw. and at 11 a. m. at St. Stephen's Church, 1611 Brentwood rd. ne.

Harry Shoup, cochairman of the drive for $21,000 for the society, will speak at 9:30 a. m. at Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, Maryland ave. and 9th st. ne. At 11 a. m. Mrs. Clarence T. Nelson, a member of the board of directors and wife of the pastor of Augustana Church, will speak at St. Matthew's Church, Kentucky ave. and 16th st. se.

The society has a full-time social worker on family welfare and juvenile problems, and maintains a chaplain at District institutions. It recently was designated Lutheran agency for settlement of displaced persons in this area.

Decorations on the cake are the flag of the Washington diocese and the shield of St. Thomas' Church. With Mr. Sedgwick are (from left) Mrs. Robert M. Eaves and Mrs. Hiram Bingham

Youth Group Activities To Be on Air

Activities of the Federation of Christian Youth will be portrayed on a radio broadcast over Station WMAL at 5:45 p. m. today as one of the "Youth Week" events planned by Washington churches.

The radio playlet was written by Mrs. Delight Williamson Holt, wife of the minister of music at Calvary Baptist Church, and directed by the Rev. Hubert Beckwith, assistant pastor of First Congregational Church.

Youth week, which opened last Sunday, will be concluded with a rally at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., at 8 p. m. Sunday. The service will be conducted by the young people, and three of the group will speak on the theme "Let God Speak Through a United Church." Sponsor of the rally is the Federation of Christian Youth, which is a part of the Washington Federation of Churches.

At Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia rd. nw., the entire 11 a. m. service Sunday will be in charge of the Pilgrim Fellowship, the church youth group. Four young people will speak on "What Christianity Means to Me."

Hamline Methodist Church, 4501 16th st. nw., will observe Youth and Boy Scout Sunday together. At 11 a. m. Dr. Harry W. Burgan, the pastor, will speak on "Adventure—That's Life." Church Boy Scouts and Cub Packs and the young people will attend the service.

Youth Day also will be observed at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. Two of the young people will join the pastor, the Rev. J. Warren Hastings, in speaking on "Youth Returns to Religion," at 10:50 a. m.

Miss Zaidi is one of the first Arabs to study in the United States and return to her native country to do Christian work. She plans to develop a Protestant mission school for Moslem children.

Christian Endeavor societies at a number of churches also have sponsored Youth week activities. On Monday at 6:30 p. m. Ernest R. Delegates Predict Churches' Merger

Cleveland, Feb. 4 (AP).—Merger proponents tonight predicted quick approval by the general council of the Congregational Christian Churches of a union with the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

More than 40 delegates debated the merger before the council. The sentiment appeared to lean strongly toward combining the two denominations into the United Church of Christ.

The proposal was ordered to a vote Saturday.

In a test vote, less than 100 of the 900 delegates favored a move to rule the council was without authority to act on the plan.

Earlier today, the church's commission on interchurch relations and Christian unity recommended to the council that it approve the union.

The guild will be certified as collective bargaining agent for both the Morning and Sunday Sun and the company's afternoon paper, the Evening Sun.

There were nine challenged and mail ballots. These will not be counted since they are insufficient to affect the election result, the NLRB representative said.

A total of 203 ballots was cast. About 211 employes were eligible to vote. One ballot was voided.

Big 'Y' Problem

Thousands Of Boys Roam Germany

From 200,000 to 300,000 German youths 14 to 20 years old without homes or parents, are roaming the western zones of Germany, sleeping in railroad stations, and living off the black market, a German YMCA leader said yesterday.

Gedat

These "juvenile delinquents" are one of the main worries of the German YMCA movement, according to Gustav Gedat, a national director of the German "Y," now visiting in Washington.

The 45-year-old Gedat is on a several-months' tour of this country, at the invitation of the National Committee for Christian Leadership and the YMCA, a movement he's worked for the past 25 years.

In a press conference yesterday, Gedat described the Youth Village Organization, which he says, has operated "boys towns" in each of the three Western zones for the past year. Sponsored by the YMCA and other Protestant Church groups, these Youth Villages attempt to equip their inmates for a trade, then find them a place in the world, he said.

But the Youth Villages can care for only a few hundred boys at a time, Gedat said, stressing that German youth is "not a separate problem. It's a question of the whole German economy."

The biggest problem confronting all youth leaders in Germany, Gedat said, is "the vacuum in the minds of our young generation, brought up in an ideology that failed . . . They are skeptical, cynical, critical."

The YMCA and other church groups are attempting to replace this "nihilism" with "positive Christian thinking and acting," Gedat stated.

Gedat said he thought America's continued presence in Germany was one of the most necessary foundations for Germany's spiritual as well as material recovery. "Is America going to stay? That's the first question they'll ask when I get back," he said.

Board of Trade Stages Dinner As Nightmare

With all the fanfare and excitement of a three-ring circus, the Washington Board of Trade last night opened the first half of its thirtieth annual midwinter dinner.

Held at the Mayflower Hotel, the evening, with "Nightmare" as its theme, was punctuated with frankenstein monsters and rebel yells.

More than 900 guests, including Congressmen, members of the judiciary, city officials and businessmen became schoolboys again as a brass band played college songs, "I'm Just Wild About Harry" and "Roll Out the Barrel."

Leon Chatelain, jr., board president, introduced the two chairmen of the event, Edward T. Offutt, jr., and Harrison Somerville, as speakers of the evening. The two men merely bowed and sat down amid thunderous applause. In keeping with the policy of previous dinners no speeches were allowed. The evening was strictly one of fun, fellowship and entertainment.

Repeat Performance Tonight

Tonight members of the House the District Commissioners and other city officials will be the guests of honor at the repeat dinner for another expected 800 guests.

As members and guests entered the reserved section of the hotel they were greeted by cannibals, witches and monsters. A devil with an electric pitchfork urged the diners along to their tables.

A hospital bed was set up in the main area to accommodate any guest suffering from the "shock" of the "nightmare" entertainment. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was named official "house physician" to care for any clients.

As the diners relaxed from their efforts of stowing away filet mignon and Boston cream pie, a six-act program of entertainment began with several assists from the audience.

Dancers, comedians and acrobats performed under a weird mixture of colored lights to put the final touches to a "nightmare" evening.

NAM Urges Court to Permit Lobby Act Test Before Charge

The National Association of Manufacturers yesterday urged a special three-man court to permit it to challenge constitutionality of the Federal Lobbying Act.

NAM has filed, "under protest," some of the act's required forms, but has not registered as an organization under the law, which it declares is "fatally uncertain and unintelligible in many respects."

As a result of its failure to register, said NAM, the Government is now "threatening" the 1600-member trade organization with penalties provided in the act.

Three Cases Pending

Three criminal cases involving indicaments of other groups and individuals under the lobbying act are now pending in District Court. The Government contends that NAM must make its own decision whether it will comply with the act, and if it in turn is also indicted, only then can it challenge constitutionality of the act.

Arguments to dismiss the NAM case were heard yesterday in District Court before a special three-member statutory court composed of United States Court of Appeals Judge Wilbur K. Miller and District Curt Alexander Holtzoff and Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Edward H. Hickey, special assistant to the Attorney General, sought dismissal of the suit, brought in January, 1948, by the NAM and its treasurer and business manager, Kenneth R. Miller.

The suit seeks to determine if and how the Lobbying Act applies to NAM, and if it does apply, NAM seeks to have the law ruled unconstitutional.

Hickey said the three pending criminal suits raise "identical Constitutional questions;" that NAM is actually seeking court "advice" that cannot be given; that the NAM suit is "premature" with no actual controversy existing, and the court has no jurisdiction at this stage.

Sees 'Complete Remedy'

"If the NAM chooses to violate the statute," he said, "they can have a complete remedy on the criminal side of the court."

Carl McFarland, NAM attorney, said, "To keep us out of court before we even have had our day in court is contrary to all precedents.

"The plaintiff," said McFarland, "is on the horns of a dilemma. He may accept an abridgement of his rights, or he can stand on his rights and run the risk of ruinous penalty."

The Government's motion to dismiss the NAM suit was taken under advisement.

The lobbying indictments now pending in District Court involve former Representative Roger C. Slaughter, Missouri Democrat accused of accepting more than $54,000 from grain interests; the United States Savings and Loan League of Chicago and Washington, and the National Farm Committee, the Farm Commissioners Council and four individuals, all named for failure to register as lobbyists.

Successor Named To Rev. Valliant

The Rev. Robert Clarke, now rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Fort Dodge, Iowa, has been named rector of St. John's Church, Mount Rainier, Md.

He will begin his work here on March 1. Mr. Clarke succeeds the Rev. James Valliant, who resigned January 1, to become rector of St. John's, Olney, and St. Luke's, Brighton. Mr. Clark spent six years doing missionary work in North Dakota and later was rector of Grace Church, Jamestown, N. Dak. He has been priest in charge of the Fort Dodge church since 1944.

Head of NAM Urges Closer Industry Ties

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Wallace F. Bennett, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, tonight appealed for closer relationships between employer and employe.

In an address prepared for delivery before a dinner of Virginia manufacturers and businessmen, Bennett held free enterprise can be preserved and strengthened only if all men and women who work for industry feel they are part of it.

"To give them this feeling and to rebuild their faith in the American way of life is the responsibility of each employer and is a challenge to spiritual leadership," he emphasized.

Bennett, a Salt Lake City paint and varnish manufacturer, said at a morning press conference, he believes this will be the year competition in business is reborn, but that he does not foresee any recession.

10 Rooms Set Up to Handle School Load

Arlington has set up 10 emergency classrooms to care for the expected 500-student increase in its public schools when the new school semester opens next week.

At Fairlington School, two former ground floor storage rooms have been painted and refinished as classrooms.

At Barcroft and John Marshall Schools, parts of the former playrooms have been partitioned off at classrooms.

The former county teaching materials office at Kate Waller Barrett School has been converted to classroom use.

The principal's office at Robert E. Lee School will handle 25 pupils, and a room at James Monroe School, formerly housing the head of the music department, will be utilized.

At Walter Reed School, the auditorium will hold some of the pupil overflow, and a former library will help fill the need at Patrick Henry School.

The Arlington School Board currently is drawing up plans and buying sites to build new schools with $6,500,000 it was granted in two separate bond issues.

Redskins Will Name New Football Coach Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CASEY STENGEL, the new manager of the New York Yankees, who was hired as a successor to Bucky Harris, has displayed in his first public utterances of the year no startling improvement over his predecessor.

At a press conference in the Yanks' swank Fifth ave. offices the other day, New Manager Stengel gave as his considered opinions (1) that the Yankees would win the pennant and (2) that the Red Sox, not Cleveland, was the team to fear.

POVICH

If those expressions are more than vaguely familiar, no wonder. Six months ago, Yankee Manager Harris was saying the same thing. He was picking the Yankees to win a pennant and he was brushing off the Indians as a threat in his higher esteem of the Red Sox.

The fact that Harris was wrong on both counts led directly to his discharge as Yankee manager, but Stengel now dares to mouth the same party line. Unlike Harris, however, Stengel can better afford to be wrong. He owns enough oil wells to maintain a raging financial independence of the Yankees' front office.

ALL OF HIS baseball life, Stengel has been a comic. He's famed for the day when he bowed low and doffed his cap to an umpire and revealed a sparrow nesting atop his scalp. But, playing the straight man in his press conference, he didn't necessarily get away from comedy when he rated the Yankees, Red Sox and Cleveland one-two-three.

In Cleveland, they're doubtless laughing out loud at Stengel's ranking. Particularly his reference to the pitching staffs of the Yankees and Indians when Stengel said he wouldn't swap his New York staff for those Cleveland pitchers even if two of the latter were 20-game winners last season, and Bob Feller won 19.

Stengel did admit, "sure, we don't have three top guys like Bob Feller, Gene Bearden and Bob Lemon, but look at the records and you'll see how few pitchers repeat 20 victories the following year. Great ones like Feller do, but the other two have to prove that they're that good."

STENGEL CITED the depth of his own pitching staff and reeled off the names of Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds, Ed Lopat, Tommy Byrnes, Frank Shea and Fred Sanford. And he also mentioned Reliever Joe Page. He was saying he was kind of proud of that line-up.

At the Turf and Grid the other night, the emcee also opened his act by saying, "I'm proud——," which was as far as he got before a ringside heckler inquired loudly:

There is some puzzlement over the pride-taking of Stengel in his Yankee pitchers, at least compared to those of the Indians, who will be in the same league with him next season. In Raschi he does own a tremendous guy who won 19 and lost 8 last season and is a willing workhorse, but thereafter the Yankee staff is somewhat dubious.

And even Raschi couldn't win important games for the Yankees last year when they were still hewing to the belief that the Red Sox were the team to beat. Four times their 19-game winner went to the mound against Boston, and four times he was licked.

ALLIE REYNOLDS won 16 for the Yanks last season, which was tolerable, but when Stengel speaks of Shea he cites a guy who couldn't pitch 10 complete games in 1948, and who lost 10, against 9 victories. Lopat won 17, but was a liability until the hot months, and this Byrne of whom Stengel talks was a paltry eight-game winner.

The Yankees are setting great store by Fred Sanford, the fellow for whom they gave the Browns $100,000 in December, and he may indeed prove helpful. But he led the league in losing games last season, with 21 charged against him, and his earned-run record of 4.64 per game leaves his skill somewhat suspect. The Browns may not have supported Sanford with many runs, but defensively they were an excellent ball club and he could not quarrel with his support.

Stengel, of course, has a special rooting interest in his pitchers. No longer are the Yankees a Murderers' Row and never did they lean so much on pitching, so little against pitching. After all, Stengel could overestimate himself right out of a job. One pennant and a world championship in two years wasn't enough to keep Bucky Harris in the post.

Klieman Gets Raise From Nats; Haynes Odd Holdout

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Ed Klieman, the pitcher who yelped in anguish when advised he was traded from the Cleveland Indians to Washington last December, has made his peace with Clark Griffith and accepted salary terms for 1949.

For Klieman there was some solace in his transfer from the pennant-winning Indians to the seventh-place Nats. He was favored with a substantial lift in pay although his salary was not disclosed.

When the deal was announced Klieman balked at joining Washington, pointing out that he had recently purchased a home in Cleveland and "they can't pay me enough money to move." Apparently they did.

In Klieman the Nats plucked the second most effective pitcher in the American League, on an earned-run basis. He figured in 41 games for the Indians and although winning only three, against two defeats, he compiled an earned-run record of 2.59 per game. Only his Indian teammate, Satchel Paige, surpassed him in that department.

Haynes Hasn't Signed

Klieman is the second of the trio obtained from Cleveland in the swap for Mickey Vernon and Early Wynn, who are now under contract to the Nats. First Baseman Eddie Robinson accepted terms a few weeks ago.

Paradoxically, the only unsigned member of the former Cleveland trio is Pitcher Joe Haynes, Clark Griffith's nephew by marriage, who has not seen fit to accept terms as yet.

In Orlando, Fla., yesterday, Griffith stated that he expected Haynes to sign eventually. When it was suggested that the influence of Mrs. Haynes, a stockholder in the Washington club, be enlisted, Griffith laughingly declared, "She's the one I'm having trouble with. My niece in making her husband hold out."

Griffith admitted to difficulty in signing other key members of his pitching staff—Walter Masterson, Sid Hudson, Mickey Haefner and Milo Candini. More than 20 of the 39 Nats on the roster have accepted terms but in the main they are rookies. Still bargaining for more money in addition to his pitchers are Second Baseman Al Kozar and Third Baseman Eddie Yost.

Seek New Coach

The Nats are in the market, also, for a new third-base coach, following the disclosure yesterday that Sammy West has spurned a new Washington contract and will retire to his sporting goods business in Lubbock, Tex. West has been with the Nats intermittently since 1926 as ace centerfielder and coach.

West's decision to retire revealed a breach between himself and Manager Joe Kuhel who last fall advised Griffith that he desired to replace West as a coach. Later in the year Kuhel recanted and expressed his willingness to continue with West.

Griffith declared that he had offered West a job with the Nats in a capacity as scout and added, "He's welcome in our organization as long as I am president."

Eagles Start Slowly, But Win Easily

After a slow first period in which only 10 points were scored, American U. pulled away to coast to a 60-39 triumph over Baltimore U. here last night.

It was the seventh Mason Dixon Conference victory for the Eagles against one defeat.

Both clubs used the zone defense and scoring was reduced to practically nothing in the first 10 minutes of play. The Eagles held a bare 6-4 lead at that juncture. But Ronnie Garshag, who dunked in 19 points, and Bob Lamon got going and so did the Eagles, carrying a 23-17 lead to their dressing room at halftime.

The losers missed 12 of their 23 free throws.

Braves Charged With 'Tampering'

San Francisco, Feb. 4 (AP).—The San Francisco Seals contended today they had proof major league clubs were violating baseball law by "tampering" with high school players before graduation.

Vice President Charles J. Graham of the Pacific Coast League Braves. demand a formal investigation by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Terps Whip VMI, 53-45

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 4.—Oft-beaten Maryland kept alive its slim chance of making the playoffs by defeating Virginia Military Institute, 53-45, here tonight in a Southern Conference basketball game.

Lee Brawley, former member of the Navy Olympic team, did a nice job of filling in for ineligible Bob Murray by tallying 22 points. Brawley led the Terps with nine baskets and four foul tosses.

The Terps' triumph makes their conference record 3-4. VMI, winner of only one league contest, was led by Forwards Fain and Recher who made 16 and 11 points, respectively.

Caps Drop In at Uline Arena Tonight to Oppose Knicks

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

After a six-day swing through the troublesome East and turbulent West, the Caps are home this evening for a one-night Uline Arena stand before shoving off on another road trip.

At 8:45, four hours after they arrive from St. Louis, Washington's Eastern Division leaders tackle the New York Knicks. At midnight they grab a train for Fort Wayne for a Sunday night engagement against a Piston team which hasn't been hitting on all cylinders.

The return of the natives will be greeted by some 5500 pro court devotees and a Knick team which has yet to beat the Caps this season.

All three of their previous tussles have been close, but Washington has bagged every one and is a nine-point favorite to make it four straight tonight.

Both clubs will have something new to exhibit to spectators tonight. The Knicks now employ Ray Lumpp, former NYU All-America, whom they obtained from Indianapolis in a swap for Tommy Byrnes.

The something new that's been added to the Caps is Kleggie Hermsen, 6-feet-9 center who's been with the team all season. Only in the past two days, however, has Big Kleggie been accentuating his presence. He dumped in 60 points in Washington's last two successes pouring in 33 against Indianapolis and 27 against St. Louis.

And it's a good thing that the former Minnesota hot shot chose this stage of the campaign to blossom out as a scorer. Bones McKinney, Bob Feerick and Freddie Scolari, the Caps' offensive wheelhorses, are beginning to tire and Hermsen is just what the Caps need to take up the slack.

Coach Joe Lapchick's Knicks, trailing the Caps by 9½ games with only 17 games to play, have all but conceded the Eastern flag to Washington.

Supporting Lumpp, a deadly set shot, will be Sid Tannenbaum, who almost wrecked the Caps here last week; Carl Braun, 14-point-game scorer; Lee Knorek, former Cap Irv Rothenberg, Capt. Johnny Palmer and Goebel Ritter.

McKinney and Feerick will be in the starting array along with Hermsen, but the other two Cap starters are doubtful. Scolari missed Thursday's St. Louis tussle, nursing an ailing tummy. He's better and will probably play.

Terps Drop Two Lacrosse Players

Two Maryland lacrosse players, including All-America Giles Freeman, have been dropped from the squad because of scholastic deficiencies, it was learned last night.

In addition to Freeman, Don Hillery also was cut off because he failed to pass the necessary work.

GW at Navy Today

Hoyas Play St. John's Tonight At Armory in Top Area Game

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown, which has been promoting successful college doubleheaders with GW, goes in business for itself tonight at the Armory, entertaining classy St. John's of Brooklyn.

The Hoya game will start at 9:30 p. m. after two preliminaries. In the first, Georgetown Frosh meets Bullis Prep and in a special service contest Quantico Marines play Camp Lejeune, N. C., Marines.

All other area schools are on the road. George Washington returns to the scene of one of its greatest basketball victories at Annapolis when it meets Navy at 2:15 p. m. Two years ago, the Colonials handed the Middies their lone regular season loss in Dahlgren Hall.

Maryland's at Washington and Lee for a Southern Conference duel and American U. travels to Western Maryland for a Mason-Dixon Conference engagement. Virginia plays at Dickinson.

St. John's is an underrated club and Georgetown's sure to find it more dangerous than its 9-6 record indicates. The luckless Redmen have played terrific basketball against some of the Nation's top teams.

At one stage, the visitors lost five straight but look how they lost them: Utah, No. 12 team in the country, started the streak by winning, 66-57. Then St. John's lost by two points to CCNY; three to Loyola of Chicago; two to Temple and three to DePaul.

In its last start, St. John's crushed St. Joseph's of Philadelphia team, 62-45, and St. Joe beat Oklahoma A. & M. It also holds decisions over Tennessee, Denver,

Lions Finally Win One, 6-2

Coach Frank Beisler's Washington Lions snapped a losing streak that had extended through 15 straight matches last night when they outclassed the Philadelphia Rockets in an American Hockey League game on Uline ice, 6-2.

A crowd of 1345 persons saw Rookie Goldie Lou Crowdis play magnificently in the nets and Tom Forgie and George Robertson, newly acquired forwards, star on offense.

The Rockets, previously a four-time conqueror of the local pros, pulled within a 2-3 score in the final period on Phil Hergesheimer's second goal of the night, but Norm McAtee, Harry Frost and Pat Wilson fired successive goals down the stretch.

Celtics Rally; Whips Jets, 75-64

Boston, Feb. 4 (AP).—A Last-period blast of 26 points enabled the Boston Celtics to win their first game in their last three tonight as they turned back the Indianapolis Jets, 75-64. A gathering of 4881 faithful braved heavy New England weather to cheer the Celtics.

It was a nip and tuck affair to the six minute mark of the final period when Gene Stump sparked the Boston team by developing a hot hand from both outside and underneath.

Rib Injury Discovered

Hogan Has No Back Fracture, Should Recover in 2 Months

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—An attending physician said today that Bantam Ben Hogan, the Nation's No. 1 golfer, should recuperate rapidly from multiple injuries received in an automobile accident and may be well healed within two months.

The encouraging information came in a midafternoon bulletin from Dr. Davis Cameron after he had completed another in a long series of X-rays of the little golf king.

Most optimistic note in Dr. Cameron's report was that Hogan definitely did not have a back fracture—an angle that had caused much apprehension as to Hogan's future on the links.

Dr. Cameron's bulletin came close on the heels of a report that Hogan was "in quite a bit of pain" today from the various fractures suffered when his car collided with a bus 150 miles east of here Wednesday.

The bulletin stated that a tiny fracture had been discovered in one of Hogan's ribs in addition to the broken collarbone, fractured pelvis and ankle bone previously revealed.

Hogan's ankle was placed in a cast today and Dr. Cameron said the pelvis area would be put in a cast in a few days. Hogan's wife said he appeared "exhausted" from today's ordeal. No visitors have been allowed in his room.

Dr. Cameron said Hogan should recover enough within a week or 10 days to be moved to his home in Fort Worth.

He said the collarbone fracture was on the left side, but the rib fracture was on the right side.

He'll Be Back

Hogan Hurts No Solace To His Rivals

By Red Smith

New York, Feb. 4.—The paper said Ben Hogan smiles when the doctors told him he would be able to play golf again. That figured, even though Ben doesn't smile a great deal. When a game is worth $90,000 a year to a guy ("Time," January 10), he can be forgiven for preferring it to a wheel chair or hospital bed.

After the first frightening reports that he had suffered a broken back in a highway crash in Texas the other day, it was a relief to read that his injuries were not so serious as to finish him as a competitor. But no surprise, for that figured, too. There are some pretty loose gamblers in professional golf but none reckless enough to bet on a few tons of speeding bus against Hogan.

"A fractured pelvis," his playmates on the professional circuit would sniff, "a busted collarbone, cuts, contusions, abrasions, shock and maybe some cracked ribs? Hell, he's been worse than that in a single round, how about the time he took an 11 on a par-three at Jacksonville?"

At 36, Ben Hogan is the oldest of the major sports champions. Joe Louis, who is younger, is over the crest.

"I love the competition," he said a few weeks ago. "I hope I'm not at the top of my game; I hope I'm getting better."

The notion that he could get better did not enchant the golfers who had stood aside and watched Ben collect $32,112 in purses last year. It brought no comfort to Mike Turnesa for the walloping Mike took, 7 down and 6 to play, in the final of the 1948 PGA championship.

It wasn't an altogether rosy prospect for those who trailed in the National Open last June when Hogan hacked five strokes off the tournament record of 281. Those guys, they could look back and count the years when Ben won more money than anyone else in golf—$10,656 in 1940, $18,358 in 1941, $13,143 in 1942, $42,556 in 1946. They could review the record which won the Vardon trophy last year, 69.3 strokes for every round.

It is a curious sort of love of competition that makes a man go white about the lips and freezes his features into a death mask.

Starting out in a tournament he is a dark man, the deep brown tones accentuated by the white cap he usualy wears.

Round by round as play goes on, his face grows grayer. You could walk onto the course in the midle of a tournament and the shade of Hogan's complexion would tell you how close a decision was.

It is an old story how Hogan, just out of his teens, tried the tournament circuit and went broke, tried it again and went broke, practiced for four years and tried again, and then scrambled for three years more before he hit the jackpot.

Success never came easily to the blacksmith's son from Dublin, Tex. Even his first job as a caddy came hard. The tale goes that when he showed up seeking work the caddies at Glen Garden Country Club near Fort Worth rolled him down a rocky hill in a barrel, larruped him with paddles, then picked out a kid for him to fight. Ben licked him and was hired.

Hollywood Production Is Planned At Signing

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Promptly at 3:30 this afternoon the Washington Redskins will sign ——, former grid great at ——, as head coach for the 1949 season.

This was learned exclusively by everybody yesterday as General Manager Dick McCann, cornered in his 9th and H sts. office, admitted a successor to Turk Edwards had been obtained.

Thus ends almost two months of wild speculation since Edwards, after three disastrous years, moved into the front office as executive vice president.

The signing will make a piker of MGM. With thousands milling in the street outside, cameras will grind, flash bulbs will flash, reporters will stand with pencils poised.

T-Formation Man

Then —— will be introduced formally. He will have his picture taken with his arm around (1) the Redskins' cigar store Indian, and (2) President George Marshall. He will announce that he expects to continue the T-formation with the Redskins, and Marshall will announce that —— will have a free rein with the coaching.

"I am not familiar with all the Redskins," ——— will say, "but it seems to me I have a lot of excellent material to work with. I hope to give Washington a winner and know I'll be happy working here."

Terms of the contract given —— will not be released, as usual, but it will be thought that he will earn approximately $20,000 a year. This estimate will be approximately $5000 too high, but nice reading.

With the signing of —— the 'Skins bring to a close a guessing game that has involved almost every coach in the country.

Most prominently mentioned, and the only other coach actually to be offered the Redskins post was Paul (Bear) Bryant, former Maryland mentor now under a 10-year contract to the University of Kentucky.

But sounded out by the Redskins—or their official and unofficial representatives—were such grid experts as Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame; Jimmy Conzelman, formerly of the Chicago Cardinals; Blair Cherry, of the University of Texas; Bobby Dodd, of Georgia Tech; Wally Butts, of Georgia; Bud Wilkinson, of Oklahoma; and Wilbur Moore and Herman Ball, present Redskin aides.

Buffalo Owner Sees Pro Peace Shortly

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—The owner of the All-America Conference Buffalo Bills today predicted pro football peace "through two leagues and not as a merger" in the "relatively near future."

James F. Breuil, the oil firm president who brought pro football to Buffalo, made the statement at a news conference. He did not elaborate on what he meant by "relatively near future."

"Peace between the two leagues is blocked now by a small minority in the National League," Breuil said. "Opposing it are Tim Mara of the New York Giants and George Preston Marshall of the Washington Redskins."

Wilson Wins, Becomes First In Playoffs

Wilson's Green Tigers clinched a playoff berth and McKinley Tech's Trainers entered into a fourth-place tie with defending champion Central in Interhigh games yesterday.

Wilson romped over Chamberlain, 62-20, and Tech used 13 men but still couldn't prevent an 81-31 trouncing over winless Bell.

Central has a chance to break that fourth-place deadlock with Tech if they beat Roosevelt in the first game of a doubleheader at the Armory at 1:30 p. m. today. Eastern meets Anacostia in the second game.

Boyle Aims To Avoid Trot Competition

In a surprise move, the Charles Town Jockey Club yesterday applied to the West Virginia Racing Commission for spring and summer dates at three intervals, the longest—21 days, April 11 to May 4—to be in direct conflict with Havre de Grace.

Thus the Graw, after jockeying around to escape opposition from New Jersey tracks for the Philadelphia crowd, may find itself bucking the West Virginia oval for the Baltimore and Washington trade, particularly the latter.

Charles Town also has asked for a 13-day session, May 16 to May 30, and an 18-day meeting, June 27 to July 16. In all the track seeks its usual 48 programs with four being allotted to the Charles Town Horse Show Association.

Boyle Gives Reasons

A. J. Boyle, president and general manager of Charles Town who is now at Pittsburgh where he is constructing the nearby Waterford Downs track, said, "Our normal dates would have brought us into conflict with both Delaware Park and the Oxon Hill and Laurel harness tracks, something we want to avoid as much as possible. With Maryland operating 12 tracks and Delaware another, naturally we have to select dates that would be advantageous to us.

"Our schedule would leave four weeks open in June which, if they wish, Cumberland and Hagerstown could use. This would keep the horses on the same circuit with Bel Air, Timonium and Marlboro meets following our closing."

Bucks Delaware Park

The second meeting would buck Delaware Park on May 30 and also Oxon Hill, while the third would be in opposition to Delaware for a week through July 4 and Laurel Raceway throughout the 18 days.

Maryland's major track spring dates have been approved by the racing commission as follows: Bowie, March 28 to April 9; Havre de Grace, April 11 to May 4; Pimlico, May 6 to May 14.

The minor tracks have applied for Hagerstown and Cumberland, 10 days starting July 20; Bel Air, August 3 to August 13; Marlboro, August 24 to September 3; Timonium, August 31 to September 10.

The trotters overlapped slightly in their date aplications with Oxon Hill asking May 28 to June 25 and Laurel seeking June 21 to July 19.

Priory strengthened its grip on first place in the Tri-State High School League with an easy 72-32 victory over Stuyvesant of Warrenton last night at Priory. It was Priory's sixth straight league win, and put the Panthers a full game ahead of idle Devitt.

B-CC Whips Blair, 47-31; Ties for Title

Avenging an earlier 28-27 defeat, Bethesda-Chevy Chase's Barons trampled Montgomery Blair, 47-31, last night before 3300 fans at College Park. The two teams are tied for the Montgomery County championship, with no playoff date set yet.

Freddie Genau, who scored 21 points, and Vink Guandolo, whose defensive play harassed Blair's attack, were standouts in Bethesda's victory. Bethesda led, 13-7, 24-20, and 29-25, at the end of the first three quarters, and ran away in the last period.

Bethesda has a season's record of 14-1, compared to 13-3 for Blair.

Housing Plan to Aid 'Little Man' Is Given

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Governments program for "the little fellow"—the wage earner in the $50-a-week bracket—was outlined to the Senate Banking Committee yesterday by Administration witnesses.

Housing authorities are putting increasing emphasis on the problem of the lower middle income group—estimated at 26 per cent of the population—those persons whose annual incomes range from $3000 to $4000 a year.

Raymond M. Foley, Housing Administrator, told the committee that thousands of such small wage earners want to buy homes but cannot afford to go into the $10,000 and above class now being built.

Urges Loans to Co-ops

Commissioner Franklin D. Richards of the Federal Housing Administration urged the desirability of the Government's making direct loans to nonprofit cooperative ownership corporations to build small homes. Such cooperatives would have to have at least an 80 per cent veteran membership to secure 100 per cent mortgage insurance of current building costs. For nonveterans in cooperatives, the mortgage insurance would be 90 per cent of current values.

Under this measure, FHA would extend technical advice and assistance in home planning to such cooperatives.

Foley urged an expansion of Government housing research. He said that if only 10 per cent of homes built last year had used improved roofs and septic tanks developed by his agency, 20 million dollars would have been saved in costs. It cost $150,000 of research funds to develop them.

Both Administration spokesmen asked for authority to increase the total insurance authorization under Title II of the National Housing Act from five billion dollars to six billion dollars.

Extension Asked

Richards and Foley asked for a one-year extension beyond March 31 of Government insurance on mortgages for rental housing started during the war to speed emergency housing.

They also asked Congress to increase the present $6000 maximum loan to $6650 or 95 per cent of the $7000 value, and they asked for authority for FHA to temporarily suspend payments on mortgages to borrowers who could not meet their obligations.

A special provision allowing the Government to furnish operating capital to builders of homes for the lower and moderate income families was also requested.

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) suggested the Government spur a "back-to-the-farm movement" for city slum dwellers.

Favors Rural Building

"I think we might be able to do a better job on housing," Maybank declared, "if we moved more people out of the city slums to rural and country areas. The land there is cheap and we could save a lot of money by building up rural homes and rural areas."

Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) said Congress should find out a lot more about people in the low-income class before it spends too many more billions for subsidies in housing, health, food and so forth.

"Who are they?" Flanders queried. "How did they get that way? How many of them are there? How do they live on such small incomes? Did they ever get out of the low-income bracket and what can be done to get them out and keep them out?"

'Blue Baby' Operation Fund Started

Townsfolk of White Post, near Berryville, Va., rallied yesterday to finance a "blue baby" heart operation on Jimmy Johnson, 7-year-old son of a farm laborer there.

The farming community is in Clarke County, adjoining the home county of Claude Sine, 13, whose own community of Mountain Falls similarly raised money for a heart operation. But Sine was later rejected as a candidate for the operation, and sent home to await development of new techniques for his heart condition.

The Johnson boy, his parents said, has been a "blue baby" since birth, suffering the congenital malformation of the heart that produces a bluish tinge to the complexion. On Sunday, January 23, he collapsed in Sunday school.

Four days later, he was admitted to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for treatment and tests to determine whether his condition is correctible by the famous Blalock-Taussig heart operation.

On Thursday, however, Jimmy was returned home, and told to report back to the hospital within a few weeks, hospital physicians said. The physicians explained that the lad was in no apparent immediate danger, but that a cold and fever during his stay at the hospital delayed full diagnosis of his case.

Meanwhile, a fund of $500 was being sought to finance the heart operation by a neighbor and community leader, Mrs. C. C. Funkhouser. Aiding in the fund-raising campaign is Mrs. John Hardesty, county health nurse.

Courts' Denial Of Rights Seen

pelled to allow a defendant to cross-examine any witness whether or not the accused elects to testify in his own behalf.

Confirmation of the practice in Prince Georges County came from Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens of Hyattsville Police Court, who said yesterday it was "customary".

Asked what would happen if a defense lawyer demanded the right, the jurist pointed out that the State's attorney would undoubtedly object at that point. Queried further on whether he would sustain the objection, Owens replied:

"I would always sustain him—although this may be wrong."

He added that he knew nothing in Maryland law that justified the procedure, but reiterated the practice is "customary" in the county.

He said he was unfamiliar with the practices in other Maryland counties.

Amazement Expressed

At a hearing on McGrath's bill by the Senate judiciary committee, the committee expressed amazement over the disclosure.

Protesting that the right of a defendant to question his accuser in the Constitution, Senator Stanford Hoff (R., Carroll) asked McGrath, "You mean you want the Legislature to pass a law spelling out that constitutional guarantees apply to Prince Georges County?"

May Be Necessary, He Says

That would probably be necessary since he had been unable to get a court ruling on the point, McGrath replied.

Commenting on the apparently unique Prince Georges "custom," Chairman George W. Della (D., Baltimore) declared, "Probably they don't believe in the Constitution down there." He added, "You've really got some stubborn people down there."

Della said the committee might summon Owens as well as Trial Magistrate Allan Bowie, of Upper Marlboro Police Court, and State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie, to "explain the custom."

"This thing should be broken up," Della commented. "We'll either pass this bill or bring them up here and teach them a little law."

Truman Will Address Roosevelt Foundation

President Truman agreed yesterday to speak at a dinner of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation.

Robert Sherwood, the playwright, and Frank Walker, former Postmaster General, extended the invitation. They said no date for the dinner has been set. The plans are to hold a series of dinners simultaneously in a number of other cities and to broadcast the President's speech to them from the one in Washington.

Mr. Truman is honorary chairman of the foundation, set up to provide scholarships and fellowships to foster the study of Government throughout the United Nations.

down and found it parked 20 feet off the road. After an argument with "the fellow" in the car, "I shot him," he said.

"The lady began hollering," Edward continued "and she got out of the car and run into the woods. I did not know what kind of a tale she was going to tell and I went after her."

Hit Girl With Gun

The statement related he hit the girl with the gun, dragged her back to the car and drove it away.

Edwards said he dumped the bodies from the car near a "gravel pit," shot the girl and drove the car back and abandoned it near its original parking spot.

The car was found the next morning, setting off the search for the couple. The bodies were found three days later and Edwards was arrested November 8.

At Neglect Trial

Officer Lays Injury Blame On Soldier

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 4 (AP).—An Army medical officer who was acquitted on charges of neglecting his duty at the Wurzburg, Germany, disciplinary camp testified today in the trial of another officer on the same charges.

Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., of Philadelphia testified that Pvt. Joseph Suggs did not report the frostbite that later resulted in amputation of both his feet until 24 hours after he had been released from solitary.

Suggs, who is now learning to walk again at the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, has been the prosecution's chief witness in seeking to convict four officers of "unjust, cruel and inhumane" treatment of Wurzburg inmates.

Holmes, former Wurzburg medical officer, was acquitted of the charges last week. Capt. Samuel H. Wolford of Clear Springs, Md., former officer in charge of the camp's solitary cells, is currently being tried.

Holmes said Suggs not only failed to immediately report the frostbite that he said he suffered while in solitary, but did further harm to his numb feet by warming them on a hot stove.

Wolford's case is expected to end Monday. Col. Harold H. McClune and Lieut. Col. George E. Pinard, former commanding officer and executive officer at Wurzburg, respectively, will then be tried on the charges.

Griffin Pleads Guilty in Fatal Traffic Fight

Bennie Lee Griffin, 36, pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in Arlington Circuit Court yesterday in the death of a 65-year-old man he struck during an argument over a $50 traffic accident.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy deferred argument over Griffin's sentence until Monday at 10 a. m. and referred the strapping auto mechanic's case to Chief Probation Officer Charles Booth for a report February 25.

Griffin, who gave his address as 2120 S. Second st., Arlington, had been indicted for manslaughter, but Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Tom Gilmer changed the charge to involuntary manslaughter on Griffin's agreement to plead guilty to the lesser charge, it was pointed out.

Victim of the argument November 5 was Audie Carroll, 829 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, who died in Arlington Hospital four days later. Two witnesses testified Griffin struck Carroll twice after their cars collided at Wilson blvd. and N. Fillmore st., and another said he struck Carroll three times.

Although Defense Attorney Oren R. Lewis produced no witnesses from the accident scene, Griffin himself testified he had hit the older man only once after Carroll had struck at him.

After the single blow, Griffin said, Carroll "staggered back two or three steps and fell over backwards."

The night of the fatal argument, he told the court, he had driven in his 1934 Ford to Clarendon to make a payment on a baby carriage.

New York Woman Dies in Flames Outside Home

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—A housewife burned to death outside her home last night. Police expressed belief she had saturated her clothing with cleaning fluid and set herself afire.

The victim was Mrs. Dorothy Clothier, 37, of Staten Island.

Police said her husband, James, 38, was awakened shortly before midnight by the glare of flames outside his bedroom window. He rushed outside and smothered the fire.

An empty cleaning fluid bottle was found in the kitchen. He was quoted as saying his wife had been despondent and under a doctor's care for a nervous disorder.

Police said three notes were found.

By Cece Jones—The Washington Post

AID FOR STRICKEN BUDDY—Sergt. W. E. Lancaster of No. 5 Engine Company, one of five firemen felled while fighting a fire at 5160 Palisade lane nw. yesterday, slumps semiconscious against a wall on an upstairs porch. Dr. William D. Lane Signs Income Tax 'Freeze' Bill

Rate Still 2 Pct.; Maryland Official Opposes Plan for Cuts in Sales Tax

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 4.—Governor Lane today signed into law a measure "freezing" the State tax on last year's earned income at 2 per cent.

The bill, cutting the rate from 2½ per cent, saw quick passage in the House of Delegates, where it was introduced early last month. Owing to efforts to amend it in the Senate, it was not aproved by that body until this week.

Administration spokesmen said the tax cut was warranted because of unexpected additional revenues received from the retail sales tax.

Meanwhile, an official of the State's sales tax division told the House Ways and Means Committee today that the State comptroller opposes any further cuts in the sales tax.

Bills are now pending that would exempt from the sales tax, home-heating fuels, including fuel oil, food and drinks sold in restaurants and infants' wear and accessories.

Edward F. Englebert, assistant director of the sales tax division, told committee members the exemption of fuel oil alone would cost the State $1,000,000 annually in lost revenues.

His assertion was disputed by Delegate Albert L. Sklar (D., Baltimore), sponsor of the measure, who estimated lost revenues would total only $500,000.

In another sales tax development, Delegate Sklar introduced a bill that provides that the date by which retailers must make sales tax returns for a given month shall be changed from the 15th day of the next month to the last day of the month. It was referred to the House Ways and Means Committee.

At his press conference today, Governor Lane said he believes the method of selecting school board members should be uniform throughout the State.

Already introduced by the all-Republican Montgomery County delegation is a bill providing for nonpartisan election of Montgomery school board members. The board members now are appointed by the Governor.

Asked for his reaction to the bill, Lane said appointment by the Governor is the present State-wide practice.

Bills passed by the House today included:

HB117—By Prince Georges delegation—To provide that the right of redemption in foreclosure proceedings be limited to two years in Prince Georges County, making it conform with general State provisions. Charles County would be only one left in which three years is required.

HB118—By Prince Georges delegation—To authorize the town of District Heights to levy a street lighting tax not to exceed 10 cents on the $100 valuation.

HB124—By Prince Georges delegation—To increase from $42,000 to $47,600 the annual amount contributed by Prince Georges commissioners to county volunteer fire association and rescue squads; and to provide for distribution to various units.

HB178—By Prince Georges delegation—To raise the salary of the stenographer assigned to the State's attorney of Prince Georges County from $2000 to $2500 annually.

Montgomery Tries Again For Nonpartisan Voting

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb 4. — A second attempt to bring about nonpartisan elections in Montgomery County was launched today by the county's legislative delegation to the General Assembly.

The action took the form of introduction in the House of Delegates of a bill which would repeal the State's Lindsay Law requiring candidates to designate themselves either by party or principle.

3 Prince Georges Bills Are Passed

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 4.—Three Prince Georges County bills were passed by the House of Delegates today and sent to the Senate. The bills would allow:

1. Purchasers of tax sale property to redeem the land in two years instead of three.

2. Authorize the town of District Heights to levy a street-lighting tax not to exceed 10 cents on each $100 worth of property.

3. Increase from $42,000 to $47,600 the annual amount contributed to county volunteer fire associations and rescue squads by the county commissioners.

Some Call Budget Too High, Others Too Low; Differ On Sales Tax

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representatives of citizen groups went up to Capitol Hill yesterday to tell Congress of District needs, but presented sharply divergent views.

The citizens told Congress that the District budget was both too high and too low. They disagreed on the sales tax also.

In a four-hour Capitol hearing, the House District Appropriations Subcommittee also received from some of the 44 witnesses a cross section preview of public advice that will be given next week to District revenue raising subcommittees starting hearings Tuesday.

Subcommittee Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) explained his group had nothing to do with the decision on how revenue should be raised. He said the city budget bill will go to the full House Appropriations Committee by March 10, and is slated for House action a few days after that.

Cannon Appears

With Bates in the hearing were subcommittee members Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.), Foster Furcolo (D., Mass.) and Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.). House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) came in for a few minutes in the morning session; he once served as chairman of the District group.

A five-member delegation speaking for the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area and the Community Chest strongly urged increasing the District budget allowance for care of indigent patients in private hospitals.

Hospitals Reporting Losing

They said the non-profit hospitals are going into the red as the result of the present rate of $9 per patient per day, and $2 per clinic visit paid by the District. They said the rate should be raised to cover actual costs of hospital care. In the group were D. W. O'Donoghue, jr.; Robert P. Bryant; Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr.; the Rev. Paul McNally, and S. J. and E. J. Keyes.

Dr. Robert J. Coffey, Georgetown University professor of surgery and chief of the Georgetown division of Gallinger Hospital's surgical service, urged more operating facilities for Gallinger, where he said many patients now wait one to two weeks for surgery.

Welfare—Frank R. Jelleff, as president of United Community Services, called for an enlarged public welfare budget. He presented figures showing that Washington, where living costs are higher than in the 34 other cities for which data is available, the general relief rate is lower than in 45 of the States. He said the national average is over three times the District average.

More School Funds Sought

Schools—Largest group in the hearings was made up of those urging increased funds for varied school projects—a new Terrell Junior High School, more ground for Hine Junior High School, a new Armstrong High School, and plans for a River Terrace Elementary School. Other witnesses spoke for increasing teachers' salaries and giving them paid sick leave. Still others called for expanded recreation services in their areas, and several urged more money for dental care among school children.

The economy note was sounded at the outset of the hearings by Charles J. Bauer, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington, who called some proposed budget increases unwarranted. The call for budget trimming was taken up by Vernis Absher and Clifford Newell, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The economy note was rung in a different key by Edgar Brown, of the National Negro Council, who said the District should economize by doing away with segregation. Finally, Rufus Lusk, of the Washington Taxpayers Association, said $600,000 to $800,000 could be saved annually by assigning one policeman instead of the present two to scout cars and cruisers, except where two are needed for certain beats and certain shifts. He also proposed an 18 million dollar annual Federal contribution to the District instead of the present 18 million dollars.

Other witnesses included:

Mrs. Gertrude Evans of the District Progressive Party; Paul Cooke, American Federation of Teachers; Mrs. Frances Adams, Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action; Robert N. Burrows of the Burroughs Citizens Association; James A. Parker and Robert P. Brooks of the Terrell P-TA; Mrs. Avis Keyser, Hyde P-TA; David L. Miller, Lily Ponds Residents Organization; Charles Gordon, Benning P-TA; Mrs. Edward D. Candee, Preschool Play Centers Mothers Association; Jerome B. McKee, Federation of Business Men's Associations; William Maio, Southeast Washington Citizens Association; Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, president of the board for the Washington Home for Incurables; Samuel F. Higger, Chevy Chase Community Council; Emanuel Blumberg, Washington Highlands Citizens Association; the Rev. Leonard S. Edmonds, department of social welfare, Washington Federation of Churches; Maynard B. DeWitt, American Veterans Committee; Dr. Ellis Haworth, faculty organization of Wilson Teachers College; Howard Woodson, Far Northeast Council; Mrs. Sam Hogan, Hine P-TA; Michael J. Lane, Southeast Business Men's Association; Charles C. Beckett, Washington Urban League; Mrs. M.

Civic Federation Votes 9-8 to Oppose Sales Tax

The executive committee of Civic Associations last night voted to oppose a sales tax for the District after Ernest Harper, president, was called upon to break an 8-to-8 deadlock.

Member bodies of the federation, which are voting on the sales tax question at current meetings, had asked the federation to take a positive stand on the issue.

In other actions at its meeting last night at the Urban League, 547 Florida ave. nw., the committee authorized a federation liaison officer to work with civic and fraternal bodies, gave its committee on redevelopment full authority to represent the federation at public hearings on redevelopment, and appointed a reception committee to meet the French Merci Train at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Empire Owner Sues to Shift Responsibility

Papanicolas Claims District, Loan Firm Liable for Collapse

Nick Papanicolas, owner of the Empire Building, which partially collapsed here in December, 1947, filed suit in District Court yesterday seeking to transfer responsibility to the District and a loan company.

Four persons died and a number were injured in the building collapse. Since the collapse, approximately a million dollars in suits have been filed against Papanicolas and the Cladney Construction Co., which was making repairs to the building, at 904 New York ave. nw., at the time.

Previously, Papanicolas filed a cross-claim against the Cladney firm. Yesterday's third-party action named the District government and a first floor tenant, the City Finance Co.

The suit contends that any claims against Papanicolas should be shifted to the District and the loan company because:

1—The District issued permits to the finance company for remodeling and should have known the work would weaken the structure.

McNally Urges Shift of Patients At Gallinger to Medical Schools

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Transfer of Gallinger's "medically interesting" indigents to teaching hospitals here was urged yesterday by Rev. Paul A. McNally, S. J., dean of Georgetown University Medical School.

Father McNally made the surprise plea to the House Appropriations subcommittee, taking public testimony on the District's financial obligations to private hospitals here.

Other witnesses, representing the Hospital Council of the Greater Washington Area, asked that the $9 a patient day reimbursement limit for care of the District's indigent be changed. They asked payment on an "actual costs" basis, or that the limit be substantially raised."

Dean Sees Saving

Father McNally specifically requested that Congress change its appropriation regulations to permit District payment on a cost basis for the transferred patients. Such practice, he said, would save the District money.

Illustrating his point with a hypothetical case, he contended that besides the advantage to medical school teaching programs, the transfers of patients would cut down on hospitalization time of such special cases.

A patient with a liver ailment, Father McNally explained, might be at the municipal hospital for a week awaiting laboratory tests and complete diagnosis.

"And because of the tight surgery schedules at Gallinger, it might be another week before he is put on the operating table," declared Father McNally. "Another two weeks would be required for recuperation, before the patient could be sent home."

Ruhland Noncommittal

But at the teaching hospitals, contended the witness, the patient could be examined, laboratory tested, diagnosed, operated on, and sent home, "all in a period of about two weeks."

Informed of Father McNally's proposal, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, said he'd want to be certain of the full details before committing himself to a final analysis.

"But offhand," declared Dr. Ruhland, I see no reason why Gallinger should not be fully competent to handle the cases, especially since the teaching hospitals use Gallinger for teaching purposes, and since we are getting a new laboratory building.

"And there is this risk, and this concerns the taxpayers: Such 'interesting' cases might be kept at the teaching hospitals longer than would be necessary, and then dumped back on the municipal institution. That would be an unfair burden on the public."

Such a practice, Dr. Ruhland said, would lessen Gallinger's own reputation as a teaching hospital, and "might cause administrative difficulties" over distribution of patients sought by more than one" of the hospitals operated by medical schools.

Spearheading yesterday's pleas for higher payments for care of the District's medically indigent were officials and representatives of the hospital council.

Less Than Costs

Robert P. Bryant, executive secretary of the council, presented an array of facts and figures to show that participating hospitals are treating the District indigent "at scarcely more than half the (hospital's) actual costs."

Bryant submitted a fact sheet showing that eight contract, private hospitals lost $241,366.37 durir 1948 on care of such patients. This included a net loss of $141,782,59 in hospitalization care, and $99,583.78 in out-patient care of patients certified by the District Hospital Permit Bureau.

None of yesterday's witnesses asked directly that the budget allocation of $690,000 be increased. But all asked for payments on an "accounted costs" basis, and submitted figures which showed it couldn't be done within the appropriation limit.

Costs and Payment

The hospital council fact sheet showed, for example, that the eight contract hospitals last year showed service totaling 40,128 patient days to District-responsible cases, at a cost to the hospitals of $511,934.59. Repayment at the $9 a day limit amounts to $370,152.

Similarly, the same hospitals handled 91,164 out-patient visits from District charges at a cost to the hospital of $281,911.78. The $ reimbursement limit for such clinic service amounts to $182,328.

Other witnesses yesterday included Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., director, Children's Hospital; Daniel W. O'Donoghue, jr., council board member and representative of Providence Hospital, and Edward J. Keyes, executive director of the Community Chest Federation.

Gallagher, Raugust, Gravatte Enter Race for Nine Alexandria Seats

The list of candidates seeking Democratic nomination for nine Alexandria city offices in the party's city primary April 5 stood at 18 last night shortly before the midnight deadline for qualifying.

Three additional aspirants submitted their petitions to Democratic Chairman Gilbert Cox yesterday, raising to 16 the number seeking nomination to 7 City Council seats and making a two-way race for the nomination for the city attorney post.

There will be no primary contest for nomination for city collector, incumbent C. Page Waller being unopposed for renomination.

Last Minute Entries

Last-minute candidacies were filed yesterday by Raymond A. Gallagher, an insurance man, and Leroy T. Gravatte, jr., both seeking election to the city council; and by William E. Raugust, second entry in the contest for city attorney.

Gallagher, 413 N. St. Asaph st., was an unsuccessful candidate for election to the council in 1946, when he was defeated by the then-incumbent Paul L. Delaney by 15 votes. An Army sergeant in Italy and France during the war, he has been in the insurance business since his discharge in 1945.

Gravatte, 38, of 2810 Cameron Mills rd., Alexandria, is associated with his father in a Washington real estate firm. He has lived in Alexandria about 10 years and is seeking public office for the first time. His petition was filed last night.

Raugust, 217 S. Lee st., is a former Veterans Administration attorney and served as executive counsel to the war crimes trials at Nurenburg. He is president of the Alexandria Community Chest, judge advocate of the Virginia Department of the American Legion and general chairman of the American Legion State Convention Committee.

Opposed by Williams

In the primary, Raugust will be opposed by V. Floyd Williams, who announced his candidacy earlier this week. City Attorney Joseph Pancoast did not file for reelection.

City Council candidates, besides Gallagher and Gravatte, include Mayor William T. Wilkins, R. Samuel Luckett, Marshall J. Beverley, Roy C. Bragg, Leroy S. Bendheim and Albert A. Smoot, all incumbents; Ernest L. Mankin and John J. Ewald, both former councilmen, and Dr. Truman Carneale, James W. Duncan, jr., Mrs. Dorothy Kabler Franklin P. Backus and James C. Crump.

Boy May Lose Eye From Bullet In Target Incident

A. richocheting .22-caliber bullet that struck a 13-year-old Beltsville, Md., boy in his left eye a week ago today may cost him his eyesight, Emergency Hospital officials said yesterday.

The boy, Albert Clements, was target shooting with another boy about 2 p. m. last Saturday when a bullet from his playmate's rifle struck an iron pipe and richocheted, striking Albert in the eye, his father said.

The father, Stephen Clements, reported Albert is able to receive visitors at the hospital, where he was taken after the accident upon advice of an eye specialist.

Hospital officials yesterday reported it may be several days before it will be known whether the eye can be saved. The other eye may also be affected, they feared.

Parking Tag Clew

3 Arrested In Series of 30 Burglaries

A traffic ticket for illegal parking has brought about the solution of at least 30 recent daylight burglaries here and the arrest of three men, police said yesterday.

Charged with grand larceny and housebreaking were Edward Hereford, 30, a driver, of no fixed address, and William H. Crofoot, 25, a stock clerk, of 607 4th st. nw. Earl Haley, a bricklayer, who gave the Edison Hotel as his address, was charged with receiving stolen property.

Police said it was their investigation into the theft of two rings valued at $450 from the apartment of Sally Selke, at 1954 Columbia rd. nw., that led to arrest of the three men.

A check of traffic records showed that a week earlier, Haley had paid a fine on a traffic ticket for illegal parking on downtown 13th st. nw. A check of the neighborhood led them to Haley.

The detectives said the second ring was recovered in Haley's room.

Police said the method used in this theft was identical to that used in between 30 and 50 other robberies since Thanksgiving. The burglaries took place in the Second, Third, Eighth, Tenth and 13th Precincts.

In all the robberies, police said, the thieves first scouted the area to make certain the occupant of the apartment to be burglarized was absent.

Next, a celluloid card was inserted into the lock catch to spring the lock. To make certain the occupant might not return and surprise them at work, the burglars stuffed the keyhole with toothpicks.

United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence yesterday set bond of $3500 each for Hereford and Crofoot and $500 for Haley. All three were held for grand jury action after waiving preliminary hearing.

Elizabeth Carpenter, District Federation of P-TA's; Dr. Emerson A. Williams, Federation of Civic Associations; Mr. B. G. McIlwee, 517 Peabody st. nw.; Dr. Henry Hadley, Washington Sanitarium Mission Hospital; Horace Wilson, Armstrong P-TA; Mrs. Etta Taggart, the Washingtonians; Mrs. Ann Windsor, 4929 Ashby pl. nw., and Mrs. Florence Welch, Association for Educating Physically Handicapped Shut-in Children.

Number Man's Short Temper Proves Costly in District Court

A short temper yesterday cost Lawrence Accarino, 53, a numbers operator, of 1310 Downing pl. ne., a jail sentence of from 6 to 18 months and a fine of $500.

At the sentencing yesterday in District Court, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut commented that Accarino had been annoyed at having to be interviewed by the probation officer prior to sentence.

"Your irritation has caused me a similiar irritation and I have no sympathy for you," Judge Schweinhaut told the man convicted of operating a lottery.

Judge Schweinhaut also sentenced Harry R. Wilson, 23, of 1333 10th st. nw. to serve from 16 months to 4 years for breaking into the Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw., and stealing $11 in coins from a pay telephone and food from the cafeteria.

In Judge Alexander Holtzoff's court, two brothers were sent to prison for the $4 holdup of a grocery store here last November.

Given a two-to-six-year term was Ernest Holley, 32, of 1003 6th st. nw., while James E. Holley, 30, of 1108 Canal rd. ne., drew from one to three years.

According to police, the Holley brothers stuck up the grocery store of Mrs. Harriet H. Bregman, 32, at 1001 Lamont st. nw., taking $4 from the cash register. The robbers then began arguing over their poor choice in victims and ignored some $15 hidden elsewhere in the store, it was said.

Thieves Haul Away Safe With $5600

Thieves with the determination but not the moral scruples of Horatio Alger heroes made off with a safe containing $5600 in cash and checks, police were told yesterday.

Last month, cracksmen broke into the office of the Lily Ponds housing project, at 4500 Quarles st. nw., and tried to rifle the 600-pound safe.

They couldn't open it and they couldn't remove it. The safe was encased in concrete. Apparently they studied the problem and returned again for another attempt. This time they managed to get the safe out.

Members of the police safe squad said it would have taken at least four men to have moved the heavy safe out to the loading platform where it was probably loaded on a truck.

Stanley Baruch, manager of the development, which is operated by the National Capital Housing Authority, said the safe contained $4251 in cash anad more than $1400 in checks.

Liquor Sales For County Clubs Aired

Approximately 600 persons crowded the gymnasium of the Silver Spring Intermediate School, Chicago and Philadelphia aves., in Silver Spring, Md., last night to argue proposed legislation to permit the sale of mixed drinks in Montgomery County veterans clubhouses.

The session was a public hearing conducted by the all-Republican delegation to the Maryland General Assembly.

The audience was divided into two factions, the opponents on one side and the proponents on the other.

Members representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion Posts in Bethesda, Chevy Chase and Silver Spring said the bill would increase places where liquor is sold only by not more than 12.

When the opponents objected to youth programs conducted in places where alcohol is sold the proponents pledged the delegation that the bars would be closed whenever a youth activity would be held.

Also represented on the opposing side were leaders of the Montgomery County Ministers Association, the Bethesda Council of Churches, and the Seventh-Day Adventist church.

Woman Has 3d Degree Burns in Home Blaze

Mrs. Clara Williams, 49, of 215 B½ st. sw., suffered third-degree burns of her arms and legs last night when the second floor of her home caught fire. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital in serious condition.

The blaze, which started at about 6:20 p. m., apparently was caused by a stove, firemen said.

Area News in Brief

Motorist Prevents Possible Bus Blast

The quick eye of a motorist following a Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. bus prevented a possible explosion and injury of about 50 persons en route from the District to their homes in nearby Virginia early Friday.

A fire in the motor of the bus was spotted by the motorist at Lee hwy. and Old Dominion dr. about 12:30 a. m. as he attempted to pass the bus. He stopped the bus and the blaze was put out with the use of a fire extinguisher and with the aid of two Arlington County policemen attracted to the scene.

Bus Driver Louis Diorio, of 307 61 pl., Capitol Heights, Md., said the fire might have started when grease from the motor dropped on the hot brake band, and could have worked easily into the gas tank, causing an explosion.

Luncheon Guest

'Ear' Is Test Of Writer, North Says

To be a writer, one must be possessed of an acute ear, according to Sterling North, who will be one of the guest speakers at The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon Wednesday.

North

The luncheon will be held at 1 p. m. in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler. Station WINX will broadcast the luncheon activities from 1:45 to 2:30 p. m.

"I write by ear," says North, the author-critic - broadcaster - farmer whose latest novel, "So Dear to My Heart," is currently being shown as a Walt Disney motion picture. "I can hear dialogue. Like most poets, I react to a discordant sentence with a physical revulsion.

"A well-turned phrase sends ice water along my spine (the Emily Dickinson test of poetry), warms my solar plexus (the Arnold test), stiffens my beard (the A. E. Housman test).

"Writers without an acute ear are, to my way of thinking, idea men, word merchants or plotsters—but not writers."

North has written 14 books, some of them for juveniles. His novels include "Plowing on Sunday" and "Seven Against the Years." In nonfiction he wrote "The Pedro Gorino' with Capt. Harry Dean. He is the author of several plays and has written poetry.

Other guest authors who will appear with North are Dr. David Bradley, Ernestine Gilbreth Carey and Sigmund Spaeth.

Tickets for the luncheon are $3 and can be obtained in the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop's and at the following book shops: Airport Book Shop, Brentano's (main store and most branches), Ballantyne's, Community Book Shop, Francis Scott Key, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Savile Book Shop and Whyte's.

Trial Board Hears Charge Of Misconduct by Policeman

Motorcycle Policeman James C. Watson, 40, appeared yesterday before the Special Police Trial Board on a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer in his arrest of a man on charges of speeding and disorderly conduct.

It was the first hearing conducted by the board since it was set up by the Commissioners last November to hear cases involving complaints by citizens against policemen.

Watson is charged with altering the original speeding charge, failing to notify his superior officer of the alteration, and making an arrest without probable or justifiable cause for disorderly conduct.

Complainant is Ernest W. Britt, 35, a former cab driver, of 3725 Jay st. ne., who was arrested by Watson last August 14 and charged with driving his cab 35 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone.

Britt said he had a forfeiture set aside and prepared to stand trial in court. He told the board Watson ordered him to appear in the traffic division where he warned him if the case went to court he would make the charge speeding at 50 instead of 35 miles an hour.

Britt declared when he refused Watson dragged him across the hall by the belt to the collateral office and charged him with disorderly conduct.

The complainant said he was acquitted on both the speeding and disorderly conduct charges in Municipal Court.

The regular Police Trial Board yesterday opened a hearing on charges against Pvt. Charles V. Harvey, 35, of conduct unbecoming an officer, making an untruthful statement to a superior officer and being convicted of a criminal or quasi-criminal offense.

The charges grew out of a fracas January 16 for which Harvey was convicted of assault and battery on William E. Scott, a roomer at 6600 K st., Cedar Heights, Md., and of malicious destruction of private property at that address.

One on the Aisle—

Hit Spans Life Of a Beaten Man

By Richard L. Coe

THE YOUNG PLAYWRIGHT who achieves a hit has a high hurdle to scale with his second play. Arthur Miller, whose "All My Sons" established him with the Critics' Circle award two seasons ago, has met the challenge soaringly with an emotional, forceful drama that closes two sold-out weeks tonight in Philadelphia. He calls it "Death of a Salesman," and New York will welcome it next week. And I mean welcome.

There is nothing allegorical about this title. The death of a salesman is exactly what he is relating. Into the last two mortal days of Willy Loman, aided by ingenious staging and splendid acting, he crowds the life story of a failure who goes to a suicide's grave.

Although Miller takes care to stress that salesman's facet of his hero's career, he goes considerably deeper than this. If there is a flaw in this strongly narrated tragedy, it is the suggestion in one of the final scenes that this sort of life could have been lived only in the traveling salesman's profession.

The key to his play, it seems to me, is a pathetic cry by the man's wife. "Why," she asks, "must you conquer the world?"

For it is this stretching optimism and ambition for himself and his beloved son that is the tragedy of Willy Loman. He is a dreamer, a self-kidder. After over 30 years with his firm, traveling the New England circuit, Willy is exhausted, depressed and unwanted. During his breakdown we see him relive the dreams and failures of his life. For his eldest son he's been pathetically ambitious. He wanted Biff to be the borough of Brooklyn's greatest ballplayer and to win a scholarship to the University of Virginia. He wanted great things for Biff, the things he never achieved for himself. His younger son amused him, little more, and his wife he took for granted. Biff was his life.

But somewhere along the line Biff poohed out. Willy lacked the self-honesty to probe into his own soul to find the reason. Before he dies, though, he remembers the day Biff came to visit him in Boston and caught his idolized father in a room with an unknown woman. After that Biff took to wandering around the country, never settling down, never achieving the respect of others so dear to his father's heart.

Miller has given us this family of four in uncompromising terms. As a playwright he is not afraid of emotion. He has written one powerful scene after another, beginning with Linda Loman's pathetic understanding of her husband. When the boys—already in their 30s, but still "the boys"—deride their father, she lashes out at them in heartbroken words of steadfast love. We see Willy fired by his early employer's son: "And I gave him his name," Willy moans, "Howard." We watch the futile attempts of the sons to cheer their mother by encouraging the defeated man.

While the play runs longer than most, the mosaic is precisely composed. This is not only a far better play than "All My Sons," it has human compassion on a much broader scale than "A Streetcar Named Desire." You will soon hear a lot of comparisons between Tennessee Williams and Arthur Miller and their respective merits as America's leading young playwrights.

There are other comparisons between "Death of a Salesman" and the Williams drama. Director Elia Kazan and that scenic and lighting wizard, Jo Mielziner, produced the same gifts for both.

Kazan's direction surely makes the most of Miller's imaginative script. He moves his players with brilliant ease around the multi-roomed setting designed by the shrewd Mielziner, whose lighting is, if anything, superior to the remarkable job he did for "Streetcar."

The playing is virtually perfect, with Lee J. Cobb in the title role called on to employ all the mastery he has evolved through the years. Here is a great, robust part, virtually a modern Lear, calling for tremendous vocal power. Cobb makes it his own and I've no doubt will be called on to play it for years.

Always an admirable actress, Mildred Dunnock comes into her own as the understanding wife. One can understand this marriage, see almost every day of its long years, thanks to the complementary work of these two players. Quiet and repressed much of the time, Miss Dunnock packs a wallop in her emotional moments that reaches the wellsprings of the heart. Arthur Kennedy is Biff, Camerson Mitchell the younger son.

Mr. Miller has indeed written himself a play. And been fortunate in finding exactly the right people to bring it to life.

Gen. Vaughan Receives Argentine Decoration

By Elizabeth Maguire

GUESTS were greeted outside the Argentine Embassy last evening by Drew Pearson and inside by a long line of diplomats. The formal 6 to 8 party was in honor of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to the President, who was presented with the Order of Liberator San Martin.

The Ambassador, dapper Jeronimo Remorino, stood at the head of the winding staircase to receive, assisted by Military Attache and Senora de Lucero; the Counselor, Carlos A. Quiros, and the Naval Attache and Senora de Rumbo.

As invitations read "black tie," the ballroom was a gala scene of satins, laces and jewels. Viennese waltzes were played and champagne was passed on trays.

After about an hour, the Ambassador stepped out of the receiving line and came into the crowded ballroom to present a gold and platinum medal to General Vaughan.

'A Loyal Friend'

In the citation the Ambassador described General Vaughan as a loyal friend of Argentina, and "a brilliant soldier in the glorious Army of the United States."

"Under the august shadows of Washington and San Martin," he went on to say, "I present to you a symbol which bears the name of the hero who held in his hand a sword as clean as his soul, a sword which the people whom he had liberated looked at in astonishment, wondering whether it was a sword or a cross."

The Ambassador concluded that the medal was in recognition of General Vaughan's virtue as a soldier and an American. He added that the honor required no oath or promises, but he would like him to join with all Argentines in hoping for greater and stronger growth in order to respect and defend liberty.

National Anthems Played

The Star Spangled Banner was played before the citation was read, and the national anthem of the Argentine afterward. Then the orchestra swung into more Viennese waltzes and the crowd dispersed into the dining room and drawing rooms.

In the dining room, General Vaughan, who had accepted his honor in a few simple words which simply said "thank you," talked it over with friends. "You may describe this medal," he said to a reporter, "as bestowed by special dispensation from Drew." On close inspection the dazzling piece was found to be inscribed with Liberator San Martin, while in the center was a portrait in bas relief of the South American hero.

Few Europeans There

There were few Europeans or State Department officials at the function. Chief of Protocol Stanley Woodward attended in black tie. Two other State Department representatives, Paul Daniels and Guillermo Surro, came in business suits, and there were two or three determined-looking women in tweed suits.

Distinguished figures in the gathering were the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon, the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, the Spanish Ambassador-at-Large and Senora Lequerica, the Spanish Charge d'Affaires and Senora Baraibar.

In the American contingent were Gen. Alexander Archer Vandenberg, the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Marvin Braverman and Charles Patrick Clark.

In commenting on the lavish buffet at the party, Mr. Braverman said, "such feasts as these is the reason Washington has few restaurants." Long buffet tables offered lobsters, salmon, turkeys, hams, rolls, salads, ice creams, cakes and candies. Consomme was served first, champagne throughout the meal and coffee later.

Margaret Says She's Engaged In Her Studies

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Margaret Truman said today she had absolutely no love interest except music—"that's at the moment."

Now in New York studying voice, the President's daughter made the statement at a news conference to discuss her plans for "the concert and allied fields."

While she was being questioned about possible matrimonial prospects, she was reminded that her father said during Inauguration Week that he would like to present a cane that was given him to a grandson.

Miss Truman, who has sung over the radio with the Detroit Symphony, said she planned to be in New York studying voice at least until summer. Next fall she plans a concert tour of 10 or 12 appearances.

She expressed the hope of singing in England, France and "all over Europe" some day.

Miss Truman is studying with Coenraad V. Bos. She said she planned to spend two or three hours daily in "actual singing" and much more time memorizing and interpreting.

Leaders of 23 States Confer

GOP Leaders Hear How to Win Votes

By Genevieve Reynolds

Thirty prominent GOP women from 23 States attending yesterday's sessions of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs advisory board were given practical tips on how to win elections and reasons why the party lost last November.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who entertained the group at luncheon in the Senate dining room, told the leaders, "You can't just sit around card tables and hold big rallies and expect to win.'

"To win, we must sell ourselves and our issues—and the Republican Party has plenty to sell," she continued. "For five successive presidential elections the men have failed to sell the party and its issues successfully. But there are signs the males are beginning to see the light."

Senator Smith told the out-of-town leaders that the time to do their winning job was in 1950. "If we can't hold the Senate seats in 1950," she emphasized. "We won't win the elections in 1952. One way to make gains is through an action program."

Need Salesmen

Representative Cecil Harden of Indiana advised the group to be better salesmen for "the Republican Party and Americanism." She suggested that they begin the selling jobs in the precincts, among farm wives, church organizations and civic groups.

Representative Frances Bolton said that the farm women, not their husbands turned the tides of the last elections. "Don't overlook that group again," she cautioned.

She said that the Republican Party had to wake up to the fact that the world had changed and face issues realistically.

For example, she pointed out that 25 families living in one small house needed more adequate housing. "Who can undertake a building project to help them except the government"? she queried.

No Apologies

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers averred. "I get awfully tired of hearing the Republican Party apologize for things. I don't think it has anything to apologize for . . . the Eightieth Congress had nothing to be ashamed of."

At the morning session held in the Mayflower Hotel, Mrs. Robert W. Macauley, executive director, NFWRC, told the advisory board, "despite discouragements the party did not plan to change the character of the political philosophy it had attempted to sell but to change and modernize the merchandizing method."

Mrs. William S. Culbertson of this city, immediate past president of the D. C. League of Republican Women, was named chairman of the national federation's finance committee. She recommended a $50,000 budget for the federation and proposed that the national organization join with the D. C. League to establish and build a national clubhouse in Washington.

Lady Rama Rau Speaks

Advisory board delegates attended the Congressional Club's weekly tea in the afternoon when Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Indian Ambassador, appeared as guest speaker. They were guests of the wives of their individual State Representatives and Senators.

Lady Rama Rau told the some 600 club members and their guests that the new Indian constitution, which yet has to be adopted, forbids discriminations based on sex, religion or color." All schools or colleges denying persons admittance from the depressed classes will not receive government recognition or financial aid," she declared. "To raise the level of the depressed class, they will be given special scholarships and assured of jobs in the government administration."

Mrs. Ralph Church, newly elected president, received with Lady Rama Rau, Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of the Maryland Senator, who introduced the speaker.

Last night Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, newly installed president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs, entertained the out-of-town board members at a buffet supper and cocktail party at her home on Kalorma Circle.

With Washington's State Societies

Nothing daunted by the merry-go-round of Inaugural events, the Oklahoma State Society has scheduled a post inaugural gala dance for tonight in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. The Oklahoma congressional delegation is to be honored.

The reception will run from 9 until 10 p. m., followed by dancing until 1 a. m. Miss Maurine Howard is dance chairman, assisted by Mrs. Lucy H. Walters, Barse Stonebraker and Don McBride.

A group of District Oklahomans gathered last week at the home of Mrs. Emmaline Samuel and Mrs. Hilda Calloway to see films of the Sooner State's Inaugural parade float.

AT NOON SUNDAY the California State Society will honor its new congressional contingent at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel. Representatives Hubert B. Scudder, Cecil F. White, Thomas H. Werdel, Clyde Doyle and Clinton D. McKinnon are the new Californians in Congress.

CONGRESSMEN from Pennsylvania have received a special invitation to the Pennsylvania State Society's dance to be held Friday night in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Ray Whitney is chairman of the dance committee.

ON SATURDAY, Colgate University alumni will be honored at the New York State Society "Colgate Night Ball" to be held at the Shoreham Hotel beginning at 9:30 p. m.

An air trip to Havana, via Peruvian International Airways, will be given to some member or guest. Arrangements are being made through the Ober S. S. and Tourist Agency. Enlisted servicemen in uniform may attend the ball without tickets.

ARRANGEMENTS for the Louisiana State Society's Mardi Gras "Court of Queens Ball," to be held at the Washington Hotel March 1, have been completed.

Festival queens from Louisiana have been invited to attend and acceptances have already been received from the Sugar Cane Festival queen, the International Rice Festival queen, the Bogalusa Paper queen and the Yambilee queen.

Reservations for this touch-of-New Orleans event may be made through the offices of Louisiana Congressmen or through Miss Marcella B. Aikin, secretary of the Louisiana society.

About Cleaning Indian Jewelry

How can I safely clean a necklace and bracelet that my husband brought from India? They are made of Indian silver and have a very intricate design, almost like lace. They aren't strongly made. At first they were bright silver, but now are yellowish. H. J. N.

Since the pieces are not heavily tarnished you may be able to brighten them by lightly brushing with a soft old toothbrush and mild soap. Or you could put a little paste silver polish on the brush. If this leaves polish in the design, placing the article in water and bringing it to a boil will remove it. Or, you could place the pieces in an aluminum pan, add a teaspoon of both soda and salt for each quart of water and bring it to a boil. Do not use a method which involves boiling the silver if it is cemented together at any place.

My humidifiers, with wicks, for the radiator tops, have at last rusted out beyond further soldering. One department store offers the antique behind-the-radiator kind, which I had 25 to 30 years ago and are hardly worth putting up. They say they believe the top kind aren't made now. Can you tell me where I might order some? R. J. F.

The humidifiers you are looking for are not available because it is now recognized that this type does not place enough moisture in the air to be effective. That method depends entirely upon the evaporation of the water by the heat of the radiator, and at normal radiator temperatures this does not take place rapidly enough. It has been estimated that at an outside temperature of 32 degrees, a gallon of water per room should be evaporated or otherwise placed into the air every 24 hours for adequate humidification.

To do this, there are now room humidifiers which operate as units separate from the heating system. One type of unit nebulizes or breaks up the moisture into such minute particles that it is readily absorbed into the air. Also, with this type of unit there is no difficulty from spilled liquids. For further information about this method of humidification call the firm which handles them at Republic 1687.

Should old inlaid linoleum that is cemented to the floor be taken up before new is laid? T. L. B.

Yes, the old linoleum should be removed and the floor underneath it made absolutely smooth before laying new linoleum. New linoleum will wear through very quickly if laid over an uneven surface.

Following instructions in a magazine article, I washed the red bricks on our living room fireplace with diluted white vinegar. The result is an ugly white film which seems impossible to remove. Is there any solution which will restore the original red coloring of the bricks? V. P.

Scrubbing the bricks with a stiff brush and a good washing powder dissolved in water should readily remove the scum. Be sure to rinse thoroughly when clean. After it is clean and dry, the red color of the bricks can be deepened by giving them a soaking coat of raw linseed oil. This will make them more attractive and prevent the penetration of soil.

Square Dances Are Dream Fulfilled for Script Writer

By Sonia Stein

It is almost seven years since Elaine Carrington discovered the plight of budget-minded young people in Washington looking for wholesome amusement. But she hasn't forgotten the problem.

Last night the Washington National Guard Armory echoed to the footsteps of dancers' feet and the cries of a square dance caller, because Mrs. Carrington remembered.

Government workers, teenage and college-age youngsters, housewives and businessmen were all invited to participate in what is probably the largest long-range square dance project in the country.

Son Sparked Idea

The idea for using square dancing as entertainment came to Mrs. Carrington when she watched her 20-year-old son, Bob, and her 22-year-old daughter, Pat, dancing with friends in the barn of their Long Island home.

She had been brooding over the problem of inexpensive entertainment for Washington young people ever since she lived here briefly at the beginning of the war when her late husband was a major in the Army.

She rounded up Ed Durlacher, famous square dance caller who had as many as 15,000 people at a time dancing on the green in Central Park last summer, got permission to rent the Armory—"The size of it scares me," she says—and put her good intentions into practical accomplishment.

Now square dancing will be a weekly Friday night event at the Armory. Unattached young men and women are invited to attend as well as couples.

Age is no barrier. Anybody with the stamina to last out the dances may come. "The only one I can do without dropping is the Virginia reel," says handsome Mrs. Carrington. "That's my speed."

Family Planner

It's not surprising that Mrs. Carrington has taken an interest in planning for other people. Besides her own family, she already has three other large families whose lives she plans as long as a year in advance.

These people, the radio characters in "Pepper Young's Family," "When a Girl Marries," and "Rosemary," sometimes surprise their author and make her change her mind about how they will act, but normally she has a rough outline of their future for a year mapped out in advance.

Even their dialogue — grunts, sighs and tears—are plotted three weeks in advance. Mrs. Carrington dictates their words into a dictophone, getting all of one series out of the way for the week before she begins the next.

Rita Selects Sack Cloth for Her Trousseau

Paris, Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Not quite hiding a triumphant smile, Designer Jacques Fath announced today that Hollywood's Rita Hayworth has selected 20 of his spring and summer models for her trousseau.

The red-haired film star, in black crepe dress and huge golden-hued necklace, and her husband-to-be, wealthy playboy Prince Aly Khan, deserted the Riviera to attend Fath's fashion show last night.

As soon as the show was over, shortly after midnight, the couple took Fath aside to discuss the purchases of 20 different models, from morning tweed suits to afternoon dresses and luxurious evening gowns.

"It's the first dress show I ever liked," Aly, scion of the Indian religious potentate, Aga Khan, told Fath. "I am hard to please, you know, and this time I liked 80 per cent of your collection."

During the show, which lasted 2½ hours, Rita sat beside Aly, jotting notes in a white booklet.

Fath's new "turned down line," which he says gives the "sulky look," will show off Rita to perfection. Skirts cling to the hips, necklines are open, sides are built up with trick pockets.

One of the models Rita reportedly ordered is a late afternoon or informal evening dress with a full skirt made up of sack cloth. The top is white faille with long, tight sleeves. It has a huge stiff cardinal collar a foot and a half wide which stands up just under the chin and forms a cone to the shoulders. A wide gold belt completes the dress.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

In the days of our forefathers boys and girls were dressed like little men and women. In the last 40 or 50 years we have developed clothing especially fitted to the children. There are large, easily buttoned buttons, sturdy materials that resist wear and tear, ample provisions for free movement of all parts of the body.

Yet some parents are more interested in the appearance of their children than in the provision of suitable clothing for normal play activities. Thus youngsters are sent to school in white starched suits or dresses with all sorts of "buttons and bows." Or they go out to play in clothes that are supposed to be kept clean and neat.

More and more schools are encouraging parents to send children to school in overalls or other garb appropriate for work experience. When school was largely a matter of sitting still, reading, writing, figuring and spelling, "dress up" clothes weren't so bad. Today in school, at home and in the neighborhood, we permit, and even encourage a much more active kind of living for youngsters—one suited to their physical and emotional needs. And the right kind of clothing is an important part of the equipment for active play.

Exercise to Music for Rhythmic Slimming

By Ida Jean Kain

Would you like to whittle 3 to 4 inches off the middle measurement, slim the hips, fit smoothly into a dress two sizes smaller . . . and look and feel years younger? Then turn on a tune and frolic through some shaper-uppers.

* * *

There's no need to put up with dull calisthenics—not when rhythmic exercise is slimming, and fun to boot. You think exercise under any guise is still routine? Not when you get into the swing of it, according to an enthusiast from Atlanta, Ga.:

* * *

"About two months ago you wrote a column on exercises to give one a lift. Well, I tried them and felt so benefited I have continued them almost daily since. These exercises take only about 10 minutes, and look at my results: I have reduced my waistline 3½ inches and, by being careful of the calories, I have reduced in weight from 160 to 144 pounds.

I feel wonderful and can work like a horse, and my friends marvel at how young and well I look. I am 48 years young. Before I began these exercises, I felt 48 years old. Please urge others to try them and live more happily."

Exercise to the type of music you like best—classical or popular—whatever gives the greatest lift. And move with the rhythm . . . let the music flow through you. If you think of rhythmic exercise not only as slimming but as freedom of motion, that's the way you'll move.

* * *

Any exercise can be set to music. Here are some freeing movements that bring a feeling of exhilaration and release from tension. Go through them happily—for the sheer joy of moving.

* * *

Are arms gracefully overhead, the way dancers do, and pull up with the middle muscles, s-t-r-e-t-c-h-i-n-g through the middle. Then bend willowy to the side . . . not too far . . . back to position . . . and to the other side.

Now bend forward loosely at the waist and swing the trunk to the side, up, down on the other side, and around again. Do this with a swinging-swaying motion . . . free and easy.

Play this one to the very top gallery. Step sideward and slightly forward on your right foot as you swing your right arm up and out—way up. Feel the lift clear from the toes. Look up—it's good to be alive! Step to the other side and lift again. Best done to waltz music.

As an encore . . . step lightly backward around the room as you circle arms inward and up overhead. Then move forward, circling arms. See how rhythmic motion buoys you up?

Exercise to be really worthwhile should do as much for the spirit as it does for the figure. Then it can pull you out of the dumps, mentally and physically.

Alexander Hecht, Merchant, 82, Dies

Alexander Hecht, 82, cofounder and former president of the Hecht Co. department stores here, died last night at his home in Baltimore after a short illness.

Born in Baltimore, Mr. Hecht and his four brothers enlarged a small retail store business, owned by their parents, into 11 large department stores in Baltimore, New York and Washington. The Washington store was founded in 1896.

The Hecht Co. store in Silver Spring, Md., was opened in November, 1947.

Mr. Hecht was one of seven children born to Samuel and Babette Hecht of Baltimore. The family home was situated on Canton st. above Samuel Hecht's modest retail shop.

On his twenty-first birthday Mr. Hecht was made a partner in the growing family firm. The family then opened more stores in Baltimore and New York and in 1896 the Hecht Washington store was opened under his management. The store still occupies its original site at 513 7th st. nw.

In 1918 the family partnership was dissolved and The Hecht Co. Corp. was formed. Mr. Hecht was named vice president and in 1935 appointed its president. In 1947 he retired from this position and was named vice chairman of its board of directors.

No "front office executive" Mr. Hecht was concerned with every phase of the store's service. He often mingled among his customers asking questions and details of his clerks.

He attended many of the store's social functions exchanging jokes and reminiscing with his older associates. His favorite task was to award service pins to honored store employes.

For 50 years he commuted between Baltimore and Washington and often boasted he had missed the train only seven times in that period.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Selma Hellman Hecht; a daughter, Mrs. Rhyda H. Levi, and three grandchildren, all of Baltimore.

He also leaves a brother, Moses S. Hecht, and a sister, Mrs. Tillie Raff of Baltimore.

The funeral will be at 3 p. m. Sunday.

Concrete Use Is Ordered For Backfill

The District government yesterday issued a "change order" to the builders of the Dupont Circle underpass directing use of cinder concrete instead of tamped backfill on the east side of Connecticut ave. between Q and R sts. nw.

The action was taken after officials indicated fear that the backfill might collapse and endanger buildings bordering the underpass. The material will be placed in a blocklong trench 25 feet deep and 3 feet wide, running between the sidewalk and the wall of the underpass.

The question of how much the change will cost and who will pay for it is now being studied, Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, disclosed last night.

At the rate Lid per cubic yard for cinder concrete work by the underpass contractor, John McShain, Inc., the added work would run to $36,000, but District highway officials have contended this type of concrete work requires less time and equipment than the kind bid on and have estimated the cost at $27,000.

This Would Really Make Their Announcers 'Outstanding'

Strange as it may seem, not all my radio anecdotes originate at WTOP. Our colleagues at WMAL recently got a postcard bearing this message from McGaheysville, Va.:

"Please send me some literature on the location, history, etc. of the broadcasting industry. Also please send me some of your outstanding announcers."

ILLEGAL, EH?

One day last week, as I was eating in a restaurant which is licensed to sell liquor, I noticed that the manager was "parking" a bottle of whisky for a patron. On inquiring about the incident, I was told:

"It's illegal to bring an open bottle of whisky into an establishment which is licensed to sell liquor by the drink. So I am 'checking' this fellow's bottle for him, and I'll give it back to him when he's ready to leave."

That aroused my curiosity, and I asked Corporation Counsel Vernon West for the law on the subject.

His reply is going to have a lot of tavern keepers crying in their own beers. It is NOT illegal to bring an open bottle into such establishments.

What's even worse (from mine host's viewpoint) is that it is not illegal to drink your own liquor in such an establishment, provided that you confine your drinking to hours when the place is allowed to be open. Corporation Counsel West says: "I know of nothing which prohibits it."

He adds this: "I understand that many of the licensees have house rules prohibiting a patron from drinking his own liquor on the premises . . . probably established to increase the revenue of the licensee."

But as far as the law is concerned, you can bring your own jug.

You are prohibited from drinking "in any street, alley, park, or vehicle; or in any place to which the public is invited for which a (liquor) license has not been issued."

Having satisfied myself as to the law, I took a one-man poll of several licensed taverns. In every one I was assured: "Oh, no — it's illegal to permit a patron to bring his own whisky."

Somebody is very wrong. Any licensee who feels impelled to pursue the matter further should check with the corporation counsel's office.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

A recent Washington Post editorial included the sentence: "A great part of the blizzard area drains into the Red River or other tributaries of the Missouri, and thence into the Mississippi."

This is a highly startling amendment of the geography of my native heath—the Red River Valley of the North. How come?

Gerald Movius

Dear Gerald:

How come, indeed! Until your letter arrived, I never realized how little I knew about the Red River.

After an hour of research, I find that there are two Red Rivers. The first rises in northern Texas, and meanders down to the Mississippi (not the Missouri, alas!) at a point 340 miles above the mouth of the Father of Waters.

The second is really called the Red River of the North, and forms much of the boundary between North Dakota and Minnesota. It flows through the world-famed Red River Valley, which is one of the richest wheat growing areas on the face of the earth.

I think they're both called Red River just to confuse guys like me, who hid "Frank Merriwell" behind their geography books.

A GOOD WORD FOR OUR CARRIERS

Three District Liners furnish another postscript to our recent discussion of carrier boys. Mrs. Howard G. Campbell of 3726 Gunston rd., Alexandria, Va., says:

"Most of us get good service from our carriers, and should remember to tell them about it —especially at Christmas time."

Mrs. Campbell's carrier boy, according to our records, is her neighbor, Blake Irons of 3316 Gunston rd.

"On windy nights," reports Mrs. William Hartman of 7103 Allison st., Landover Hills, Md., "we have to lock our screen door, to keep it from banging.

"Our carrier can't put our Post behind the screen door as usual, but that doesn't mean we find it scattered all over the yard in the morning. He folds it neatly on the front step, and weights it down with a rock."

The records say that Mrs. Hartman's enterprising carrier is Roderick D. Storrs of 4234 71st ave., Landover Hills.

Mrs. Virginia M. Sherer and Mrs. Joseph Huck of 4921 Georgia ave. nw. team up to send a joint letter in behalf of their carrier.

He's Robert Swiggard of 5010 7th pl. nw.

"It irritates us to hear complaints about carriers," write the two satisfied subscribers. "Our own carrier is a perfect gentleman in every respect, and always leaves our paper in exactly the right spot, regardless of weather conditions.

"If a few of the complainers had to get up before daybreak and deliver a paper route for a week, that would put an end to the complaints.

"We say hats off to the carrier boys."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Hjalmar Schacht, the Nazi's financial expert who was in Berchtesgaden at the time, recently told a visitor about the night the Marx Bros.' movie, "A Day at the Races," was shown to Hitler and his guests. This was to be an example of the decadent work being done by the evil plutocrats of Hollywood . . . Alfred Rosenberg sat next to Hitler and saw him laughing uncontrollably. "My Feuhrer," Rosenberg reminded him, "the Marx Bros. are non-Aryans" . . . Hitler coughed and replied: "I'm not laughing at them. I'm laughing at the race horses."

A British publisher decided that world travel would broaden the viewpoints of the editors at his papers. He told them of his plan to send them abroad, to distant points throughout the world. Then he asked the 33 editors to designate the places they'd like to visit . . . All 33 requested "New York" . . . To avoid a charge of favoritism, and also because of the dollars shortage, the 33 will go to countries other than the U. S. A.

Natalie Schaeffer, of "Forward the Heart," was being directed by a Stanislavsky disciple, who said: "To achieve the realistic effect in this scene, before you read your line you've got to imagine that you're sinking deeper, deeper, deeper into water—and then you suddenly burst with the words" . . . Miss Schaeffer obeyed, and suddenly moved her hands, gropingly . . . "You're sinking, sinking, sinking," said the director. "What's the hand business?" . . . "I've touched bottom," replied the actress, "and I'm looking out for crabs."

Before the New York opening of Jean Paul Sartre's "Red Gloves," the author issued a statement in Paris, complaining that a political note he had not intended was being introduced in the American version . . . Last month when Sartre's friend, Jean Cocteau, was about to fly to New York, Sartre asked him to see the play and report to him about it . . . Cocteau saw the play, returned to Paris and reported to Sartre that all he could gather was that Charles Boyer's performance was magnificent. "But as for the play," he sighed, "I do not speak English."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Whitney Pledges Aid to Truman

By Drew Pearson

Washington.—A. F. Whitney, bustling chief of the railway trainmen, assured President Truman the other day that organized labor will suport his "Fair Deal" legislative program as vigorously as it backed him in the recent election.

Whitney

"Naturally, there will be some things about your program that some labor groups will object to," said Whitney, "for we all don't see eye-to-eye on everything. However, in the overall picture, labor will be solidly behind you in carrying out the liberal pledges of the Democratic platform."

Truman replied he could ask for no more, since "no living man could write a legislative program" that would suit everybody.

However, what the trainmen's boss didn't reveal was that he had heard a loud objection to one part of the program at a dinner the night before, attended by several Democratic Senators and representatives of all the big labor organizations.

John L. Lewis' top lieutenant, Vice President Tom Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, raised cain about the proposed use of court injunctions to prevent strikes that endanger national health and welfare. Truman had criticized such strikes in his State of the Union message, and privately he has said that it may be necessary to put an injunction clause in new labor legislation in order to deal with strikes against the public.

"Labor wants to be free," Kennedy declared vehemently at the private dinner, given by Democratic Senate Whip Francis Myers of Pennsylvania. "It will not work under a system of oppressive injunctions. That is dictatorship. Before the United Mine Workers Union will give its approval to the Administration's labor bill, we will have to see the bill in print.'

'Other labor leaders, including Whitney, Arthur Goldberg of the CIO and Lew Hines of the AFL, didn't commit themselves on the injunction crackdown—aimed chiefly at Lewis. But Whitney indorsed the proposed ban on jurisdictional strikes, which, he said, would reduce union membership "raiding."

In the end, however, Kennedy voted with the others to O. K. Truman's entire legislative program.

Postoffices for Dixiecrats?

Most interesting test of the no-patronage-punishment for Dixiecrats will come up almost immediately in regard to postmasterships for Congressman Gene Cox of Georgia.

Although Chairman McGrath has laid down the rule that Dixiecrats get no postmasters for patronage, and though President Truman snubbed Governors Thurmond and Talmadge in the inaugural parade, some of the Dixiecrats are betting a ten-gallon hat to a one-gallon hat that they will be able to get choice jobs at the public feed-trough just the same.

One of these is "Goober" Gene Cox, the debonair Congressman from Georgia.

Several postmasterships are open in Gene's district and he is going after them, despite the fact that he was one of the bitterest Dixiecrats of all. Cox is relying on his buddy, Speaker Sam Rayburn, one of Truman's best friends but with a weak spot for an old crony. Cox has repeatedly defied Sam as a member of the House Rules Committee, but the Speaker never deserts a friend.

Note—Some Administration advisers are pointing out that if the President can't control his own Democratic Party sufficiently to pass his program through the Eighty-first Congress, he is lost politically, for he can't use the Republican Eightieth Congress as an alibi.

Merry-Go-Round

Will Rogers, jr., California politico and son of the famous humorist, is lobbying to set up the Navajo nation under an independent administrator—divorced from the Indian Bureau. Rogers, who has adopted two Indian children, wants the job of administrator—with or without a salary . . . The National Farmers Union is bringing 700 farmers to Washington on a series of sightseeing tours. They won the trip by bringing new members into the union. (Each tour will be routed through the Capitol to lobby with Congressmen for 100 per cent parity payments.)

Under the Dome

Congressman L. Mendel Rivers, the South Carolina Dixiecrat, has used his connections on the House Armed Services Committee to "borrow" a Navy radio and recording equipment—worth several hundred dollars. The equipment was furnished by the Naval Research Laboratory upon Congressman River's demand—but at the taxpayers' expense . . . John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War, now president of the World Bank, is being pushed for the job of Secretary of National Defense. (He's a Republican and an able one) . . . The Government has just wound up a survey of the Nation's highways for national defense. Results won't be published until April, but the Government found that our highways have fallen so far below defense requirements that some roads aren't even equipped to handle everyday, peacetime traffic . . . Senator Pepper of Florida is following up President Truman's inaugural address with a bill to send American technical missions to the backward areas of the world . . . Inside betting in the Republican National Committee is that National Chairman Hugh Scott, who was almost dethroned in Omaha last week, will be out on his ear within six months.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Would Not Object To Publicity on Cancer Deaths

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Some of the squeamishness among Americans about the mention of cancer as a cause of death in their families may be diminishing, judging by the results of a survey by the Institute.

Health authorities fighting cancer have frequently run up against the problem of people who "don't like" mention of cancer. The problem is also encountered in newspaper obituaries reporting the death of prominent local citizens. Common newspaper practice is to be guided by the wishes of the deceased's family or relatives in mentioning the cause of death.

To see how the general public feels about the whole question of mentioning cancer in obituary reports, the Institute put two questions to a cross-section of the adult population, as follows:

"When an important person dies of cancer do you think the newspapers should or should not print the fact that he died of cancer?"

The vote:

Should	70%
Should not	18
No opinion	12

"If someone in your family died of cancer, would you mind if the newspapers said that was the cause of death?"

The result:

Wouldn't mind	72%
Would mind	20
No opinion	8

The people who object to mentioning cancer as a cause of death give a variety of reasons which may be summarized in the following quotations: "It is a private affair . . . Nobody's business . . . Nothing of interest to the public . . . Wouldn't want people to know, would want to keep it quiet . . . People might think others in the family had it."

The majority who see no objection to mentioning cancer in obituaries argue this way: "No reasons for secrecy . . . Nothing to be ashamed of . . . Make people aware of its danger . . . Could help to cure others . . . Should bring it out in the open . . . No difference between dying of cancer or dying of any other cause."

The survey found a slight tendency for people with the most education to favor publicity more than any other group. An analysis of the results by degree or education is shown below; also the vote by age groups. The younger people are more in favor than the older of mentioning cancer as a cause of death.

The figures are in reply to the second question in the survey. "If someone in your family died of cancer, would you mind if the newspapers said that was the cause of death?"
